Topanga Fever

Our April issue reunited you with your ultimate '90s TV crush, Danielle Fishel. You found this pleasing.

Please remind Danielle Fishel that she is a whole lot hotter than Tiffani Thiessen. Although it might be a little psychotic if she had a girl crush on herself. And she's a whole lot hotter now than when she first played Topanga. How much hotter can she get? Do most girls practice kissing in a mirror?
—John Kingtamer, via e-mail

Danielle responds:

Dear John, I'm leaving you.

Just kidding. Thanks for the reminder that I'm a whole lot hotter than Tiffani Thiessen. Lately my memory has been so bad (probably from all the phone calls I receive on that ancient phone) that I constantly forget how hot, kind, smart, and humble I am. Like a fine wine, I get hotter by the year. I think that's the saying. (See? I can't remember.) So to answer your question about how much hotter I can get, the answer is simple: 31 years old x 2 + Maxim photos of that heavy-ass bag of oranges = pancakes. Hope that clears things up for you. XO, Danielle Fishel

P.S. It's easy to practice kissing in the mirror when you envision the hottest '90s girl ever, Tiffani Thiessen, on the other side. Who's hotter than her, am I right?

Keep Soap Alive

I remember Ashley Benson from back in the day when she was on Days of Our Lives. Don't judge me, soaps are awesome! I knew back then she was gonna be something spectacular. I hope your two pages in the April issue are just a preview of an upcoming full feature. Please??? You guys rock.
—Brad DiVries, Mankato, MN
Only three question marks? We don't think you want it bad enough, Brad. No more Benson for you! But for the rest of the Maxim readership, keep your eyes open for more Ashley goodness this year.

Put Your Schlong in the Upright Position

The advice you guys provided in the April issue on how to join the Mile High Club in the bathroom of an airliner was certainly sufficient, if you're satisfied with a Class C rating. Like everything else in aviation, there are strict rules that must be observed: The Class A rating requires flying the airplane yourself. A Class B rating is earned in the backseat of a plane with your buddy flying. Class C is in the bathroom of an airliner, and if you do it solo you get a learner's permit. If applicants earn their Class A on the way to Burning Man, a gold star will be displayed in the upper left hand corner of the certificate. Recertification will be required in two years.
—Butch Gordo, Winnemucca, NV (Class A and current)
So, what if you do it solo while watching the volleyball scene in Top Gun*? Not that we've ever. Just, er, asking for a friend.*

Football Fumble

Guys, when it comes to "America's Team," you gotta get the facts straight. Page 77, April issue, you say Roger Staubach led Dallas to five Super Bowls ["Veteran Fight Club"]. Not true. Craig Morton and Roger Staubach rotated snaps the first half of the 1970 season, before finally deciding that Morton would be the permanent starter the second half. Staubach didn't take one snap during that entire postseason or the Super Bowl that year. You guys aren't the best fact checkers, but I still think you're pretty awesome.
—John Homonnay, via e-mail
Sorry, John, it was the '70s. We were too distracted by the Cowboys Cheerleaders to look at, much less remember, who was actually on the field.

Each month MAXIM empties its sack for you.

WE GOT IT IN THE MAIL

Feel Like Bacon Love

This bouquet made our heart flutter, and not just because it clogged up our coronary arteries. Pork company Smithfield, our secret admirer who apparently read our diary and learned of our romantic fantasies about pork, sent us an arrangement of 24 bacon roses, and now we're, like, totally going steady. And if we play our cards right, maybe they'll send us a ham for our one-month anniversary.

HER STATS:

Hometown: Miami, FL Age: 22
Astrological sign: Sagittarius
Job: Model Pets: 2 Chihuahuas

Three things I can't live without:
1. Bikini 2. Juicer 3. Yoga mat

I would be embarrassed if you looked in my old yearbooks and saw that I had braces, frizzy hair, and a serious lack of style.

I can whoop any guy's ass in tic-tac-toe.

My go-to drink is pomegranate sangria.

If I named a sandwich after myself, I would call it the Sweetheart, and it would be an ice cream sandwich with vanilla ice cream, strawberries, and Nutella in between two warm sugar cookies.

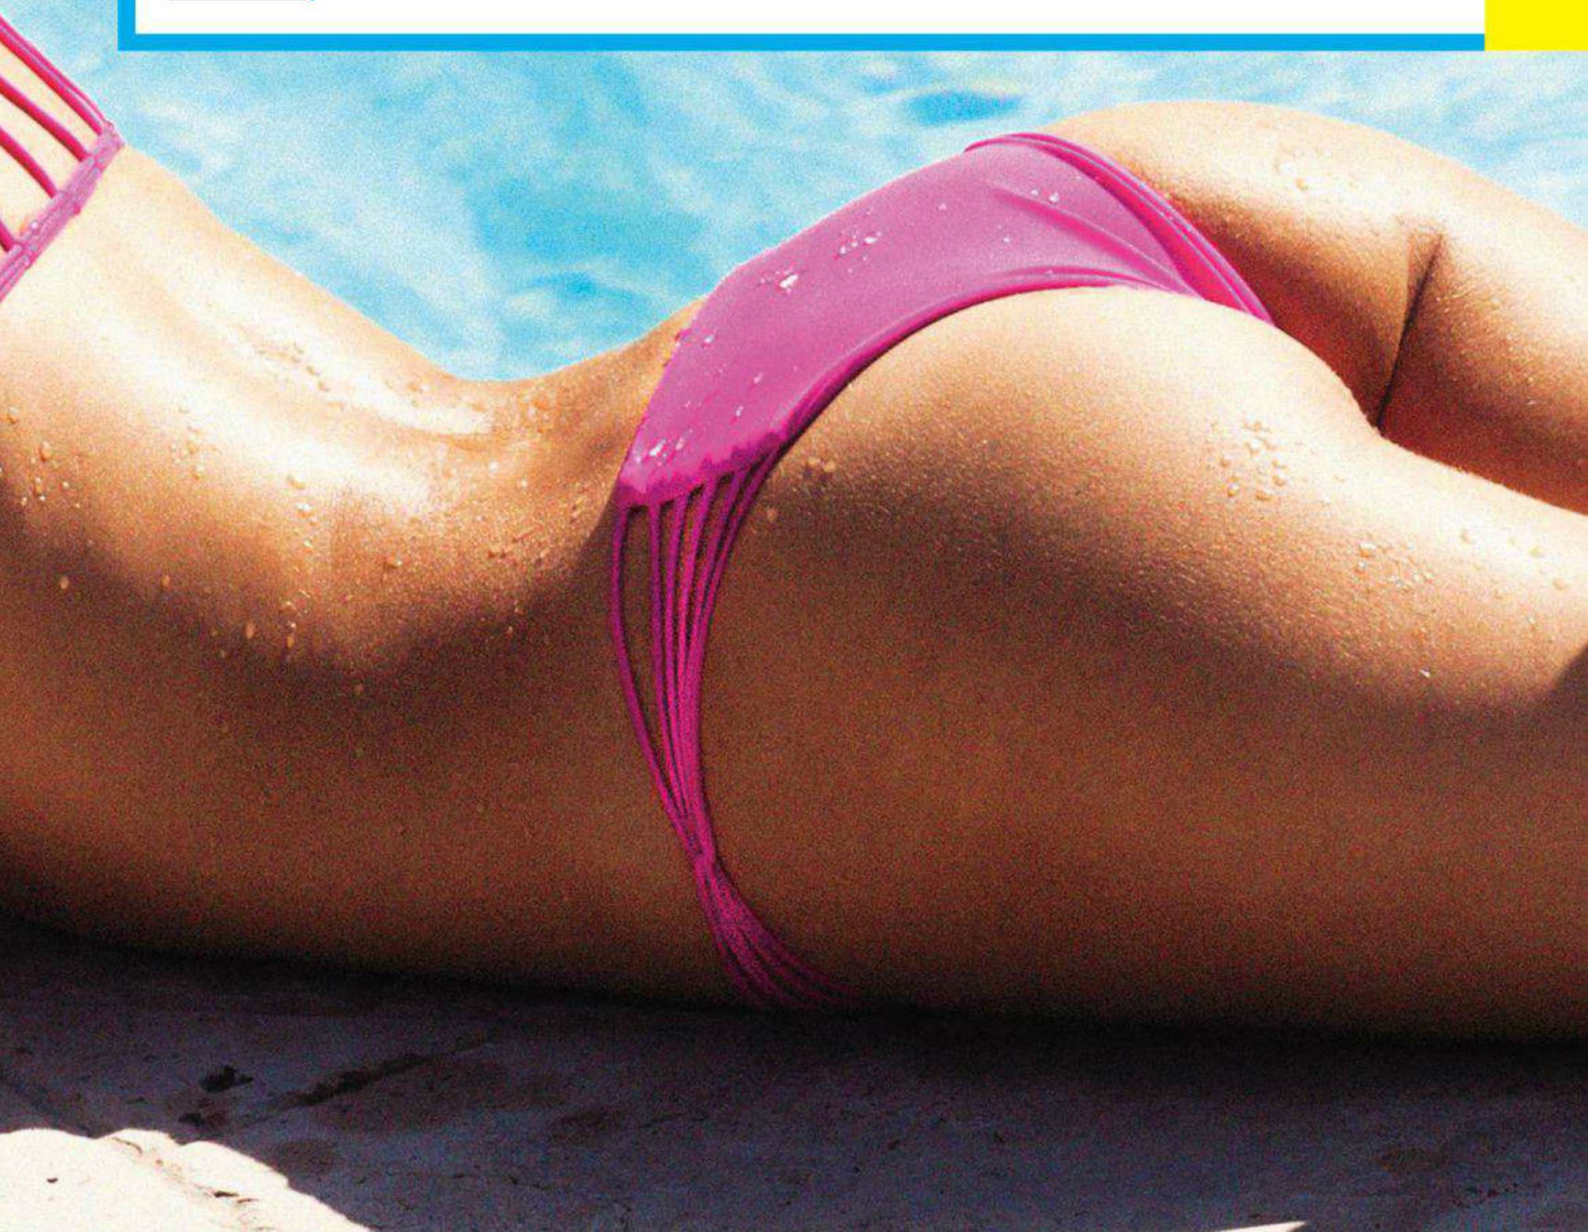

My favorite line from a movie is, "Do or do not. There is no try." from Yoda in The Empire Strikes Back.

The most embarrassing song on my iPod is Vanilla Ice's "Ice Ice Baby".

I would rather date a rabid chimpanzee than a man who takes longer to get ready than I do.

My favorite way to get into trouble is skipping a gym session to go eat pizza. (Hopefully, my trainer isn't reading this!)

AWFUL UNIONS

Crazy, Stupid Love

These weddings make marrying a person seem like a sane idea.

1 Flipping for Flipper
In 2006, Sharon Tendler, 41, wed her partner of 15 years, Cindy the dolphin, in Israel. She defined their bond as "pure love" and implied their relationship wasn't physical. Sounds like a pretty typical marriage, actually.

2 Pillow Talk With Benefits
South Korea's Lee Jin Gyu, 28, fell for his dakimakura, a big Japanese pillow made for hugging, and made an honest cushion out of her in 2010. They spent their whole honeymoon in bed. You know, because she's a pillow.

3 Frenching the Eiffel Tower
After a trip to Paris in 2007, a gal named Erika married her vacation fling, the Eiffel Tower. She took her hubby's name and now goes by Mrs. La Tour Eiffel. She had been dating an archery bow, but she outgrew him. It seems she needed something bigger.

4 With This Ring, I Me Wed
Liu Ye, 39, married a life-size photo of himself in a wedding dress in China's Guangzhou Village in 2007. Why? "Marrying myself is a process of deconstructing and reconstructing myself," he said. Maybe next time he'll opt for a nose job instead.

AMAZING DISGRACES

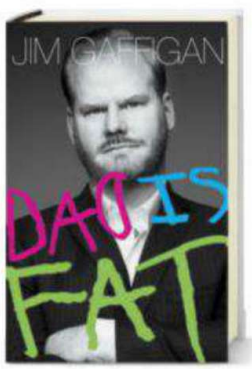

Watergate-Gate!

This month marks the 41st anniversary of Watergate, which left a lasting stain on U.S. history—mostly in the form of silly "-gate" suffixed scandals. Here are our favorites.

"Execs Call Nipplegate Unbareable" —Daily News
You know this as Janet Jackson's infamous "wardrobe malfunction," when her breast was bared at the 2004 Super Bowl halftime show. What you don't know is that people argued over whether to call it Nipplegate or Boobgate. What might've been the perfect compromise: Areolagate.

"Weinergate Limps On as Congressman Adds New Wrinkle" —The Guardian
Weinergate unfolded in 2011, when U.S. Representative Anthony Weiner lived up to his name and tweeted a picture of his undies-clad wiener. Here's hoping Congressman Poopmurder stays off Twitter.

"Toiletgate Rumbles On" —The Telegraph
Chess player Veselin Topalov accused his opponent Vladimir Kramnik of cheating during the 2006 World Chess Championship because of his frequent potty breaks. In response officials closed the private loos, and Kramnik was so miffed by Toiletgate that he forfeited the next game and moved his bowels to checkmate.

Know Your Role, Dad

This Father's Day JIM GAFFIGAN'S book Dad Is Fat will help put you in your place.

"As a dad you are vice president. In your children's eyes, you mostly fulfill a ceremonial role of attending pageants and ordering pizza. I'm always Joe Biden saying the wrong thing. When I read a story to my kids, I know how Dan Quayle felt when he spelled potato wrong. Most dads know they're VPs and are fine with it. Being 'president mom' is outside our pay grade or skill set. We can't breast-feed, and we wouldn't know how to braid hair anyway." $25, Crown Archetype

24 Hours to Live

Kevin Smith

Silent Bob mouths off on his last day on Earth.

How do you wanna go?
Eatin' my wife's ass, watching Batman: The Dark Knight Returns Part 2. If you've gotta die, die watching Batman kill the Joker. You could leave this world knowing good does eventually triumph. While you've got a face full of the sweetest ass on Earth.

Do you have any deathbed confessions?
You don't need a big dick to win in life! It gives guys hope. As I leave, a bunch of small-dick fuckers are like, "Oh, my God! He even said it when he died. It was that important!"

What if God does look like Alanis Morissette?
I win big time unless God is like, "And you owe me for copyright infringement." I imagine that would be very flattering to a deity. Somewhere the fucker who wrote Bruce Almighty is catchin' shit because the Alanis Morissette God is like, "I don't look like Morgan Freeman!"

What movie is on repeat in the theater in hell?
Home Alone. America fell in love with how cute it was and the notion of, "There are home invaders who are trying to fucking kill your kid, but he's gonna do 'em away with marbles." There was no truth in that art.

What about in heaven?
Jersey Girl. God's favorite movie. Double feature with Cop Out. I stand outside the theater laughing for all eternity. I'd pull critics aside and be like, "Look, I was right." But there will never be a critic in heaven.

What did you spend the most money on in life?
DVDs and Blu-rays. We're, like, three generations removed from this dead technology, everyone's livin' in the cloud, and I still got an unopened copy of Juwanna Mann.

If you could be buried with one comic book, what would it be?
Frank Miller's The Dark Knight Returns. It transcends comic book. The way people go on about The Great Gatsby and what a fuckin' hero he was and the inner conflict and the green light? That's all horseshit compared to The Dark Knight Returns.

What's the wildest thing you ever did while alive?
Made Clerks. It was so uncharacteristic. I was working at a convenience store and living with my parents when I saw Richard Linklater's Slacker. I was like, "I wanna be a filmmaker, too." Never did anything wild after that. I stopped riding roller coasters.

Who would you spy on when you're dead?
My kid, hands down. But I wanna make sure I time visits so I'm not there for "my first second base," shit like that. That would be horrifying to ghost dad.

Got any regrets?
I wanted to crowdsource-finance Red State before Kickstarter existed and some blogger wrote, "Ew. Kevin Smith is begging for money for his horror movie." I just dropped the whole thing. It was so high school to go, "Oh, I don't wanna be called a beggar."

Any woman you always wanted to sleep with?
Fat dudes appreciate any pussy they get, so there's no one out there that I'm like, "Man, if only…" Otherwise marriage would be a weird prospect. "I'm committin' my life to you, but in my head I wanna fuck somebody else."

What are people saying over your casket?
"Wow. The casket adds 10 pounds."

Once and for all, Batman or Superman?
Batman. All day long, twice on Sunday.

Catch Jay & Silent Bob's Super Groovy Cartoon Movie on tour now! Details at seesmod.com/groovymovie.

Which Summer Blockbuster Should You See?

'Tis the season for spending beautiful, warm days in dark, windowless theaters. But which flick is best for you? Follow our flowchart to determine your cinematic destiny.

START

Why are you going to the movies?
I want action | I want giggles | I want to nap in an air-conditioned room

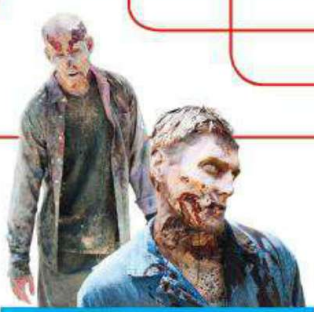

My sense of humor leans...
Blue | Really, really blue

What's scarier?
Megalomaniacs with bad facial hair | A fiery end of the Earth

What is a bromance?
The worst combination of words since "Brangelina" | The most pure and beautiful relationship a man can have

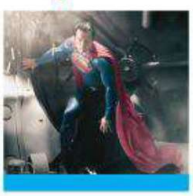

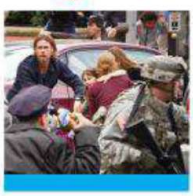

What do you like to see draped on your superhero?
A cape | Gwyneth Paltrow

What is your biggest postapocalyptic concern?
Zombie pandemic | Rationing the Slim Jims

Better '90s throwback cameo?
Backstreet Boys | Mike Tyson

MAN OF STEEL
In this Superman reboot, a young Clark Kent protects the world from evil while struggling to fit in. He should maybe rethink the tights then.

IRON MAN 3
Tony Stark must defeat the Mandarin as his life—and his armor—slowly crumble. And you thought your receding hairline was bad.

WORLD WAR Z
A United Nations employee attempts to stop zombies from destroying the world, proving that not all government workers are lazy sacks.

THIS IS THE END
All the funnymen you know (Seth Rogen, James Franco, Jonah Hill, et al.) play versions of themselves in this postapocalyptic fun-splosion.

THE HANGOVER PART III
The Wolfpack reunites for a final adventure! Expect drunkenness, debauchery, and at least one giraffe decapitation.

THE SMURFS 2
Evil wizard Gargamel smurfnaps Smurfette, and the other smurfs must smurf to her rescue! In other words, it's every Smurfs episode ever.

We Discover Our Inner Child

A reader dared Maxim to dress like a baby and head to Times Square. We sent editor Patrick Carone, kicking and screaming.

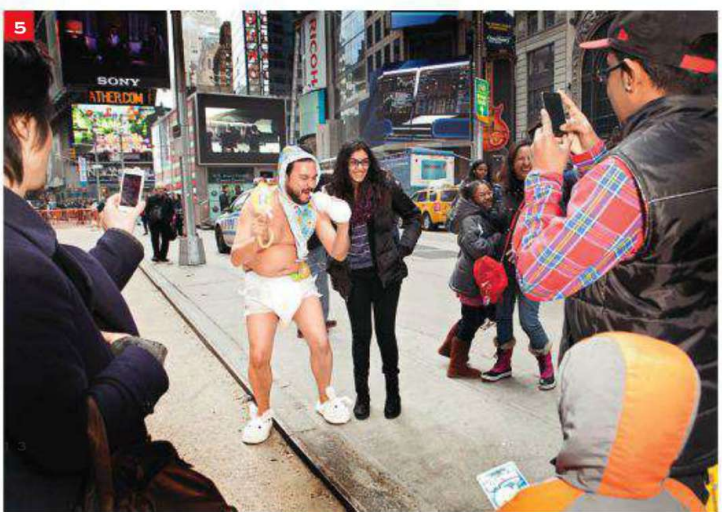

1. Minnie Mouse finds someone even creepier than Goofy.
2. A European tourist hands Baby Pat a dollar. "Stick it in my diaper!"
3. Baby Pat has never seen anything like the Naked Cowgirl before!
4. This is what happens when you step on Batman and Spider-Man's turf. (Bam! Pow! Poop!)
5. This woman can't wait to go back to her native country and tell everyone that everything they've heard about American men is 100 percent accurate.

In case you ever find yourself in diapers and a bonnet taking pictures with tourists in Times Square, be warned that Batman and Spider-Man will kick your ass. Wait a sec—let's rewind. A few months ago Maxim received an e-mail from Lou D., a highly sadistic reader who had recently taken a trip to N.Y.C. He noticed many characters—from SpongeBob to the Naked Cowboy to Hello Kitty—walking around the world's most visited attraction taking photos with tourists and wrote us, "I dare Maxim to dress one of its editors as a man-baby, then head over there." Never one to shirk a challenge, editor Patrick Carone put on a pair of extra-large diapers, removed the rest of what little dignity he had, and crawled to Times Square. Tourists from all over the world loved Baby Pat, giving him hugs and cash. In fact, the only downside to the day was the beatdown Batman and Spidey gave him. (Not to mention that Baby Pat made full use of his diaper.)

Got a dare for us? Tweet it to @MaximMag.

Skylar Grey

The sexy singer-songwriter has a new album out. Plus, she looks great on a bicycle. Let's talk to her!

We applaud you for standing up to the Grammys dress code.
I didn't know how serious the rules were until all the reporters asked about my side-boob!

In 2011 you were nominated for cowriting the Eminem-Rihanna hit "Love the Way You Lie."
The way that happened is crazy. I moved to L.A. when I was 17 with a record deal, went broke, and decided to work my way up the coast doing a bunch of weird jobs. The worst was editing porn. It's unhealthy to spend nine hours a day looking at people's buttholes.

So buttholes led to Eminem?
I was living in a cabin in the woods and super depressed. That's when I wrote the song. To have it picked up and handed off to other artists was new for me, but I'm so glad it happened, because it brought me back to the music industry.

Buttholes haven't been the same since.

Tap That Melon

The dos and don'ts of turning a watermelon into a party machine ripe for summer drinking.

DO Buy a tap kit that includes a shank and a faucet ($30, kegworks.com).
DON'T Buy adult diapers and a hammer. That's for a different set of instructions.

DO Slice off the rounded bottom (for stability), cut off the top, and scoop out the meat; set aside.
DON'T Wear the melon as a helmet. It won't protect you.

DO Cut a hole slightly smaller than the shank. Then insert the shank and attach the faucet.
DON'T Even think about making a sex joke while you do it.

DO Blend melon meat with vodka (to taste) and fresh lime juice. Pour into melon and add ice.
DON'T Drink it keg-stand style. This is a classy party!

A Good Day to Drink Hard

What better way to soak up the season than with a cool cocktail before sunset? ADAM POSTAL, mixologist at Miami's ONE Bal Harbour's Mister Collins, serves up a daytime drink worth calling in sick for.

MISTER COLLINS' GREYHOUND

- 2 oz. Cîroc vodka
- A sprig or two of thyme
- Juice from ½ grapefruit
- ½ oz. St-Germain elderflower liqueur

Muddle thyme, then pour in the remaining ingredients and shake together. Serve in a rocks glass and garnish with a grapefruit wedge. "The aromatic and tangy-sweet combination makes this perfect for any summer day," says Postal. Drink it before sundown and kiss the day's productivity goodbye.

How do we know that one human year equals seven dog years?

—Alex Hecht

Sadly, we don't. "The 'one human year equals seven dog years' is a myth," says Dr. Stephen Zawistowski, an ASPCA science adviser. "Actually, by the time a dog is seven, most of them are starting their senior years, and giant breeds may even be geriatric." So while your dad might be enjoying a midlife crisis by buying a motorcycle or piercing his ear, "49-year-old" Fido is practically at death's door. Ruh-roh!

What do actors snort when doing cocaine in movies?
—Joseph Cooke

For legal and, let's face it, cheaper alternatives to hoovering blow on film, in-dustry reports cite grocery items like powdered milk and sugar. Other substi-tutes include crushed B12 in Spring Breakers and baby laxatives in Weeds, but an urban legend has it that Al Pacino snorted the real stuff in Scarface. Say hello to my not-so-little habit!

Why is it more painful when you hurt cold hands?
—Jose Rivera

Mercy internist Marc I. Leavey, M.D., explains: "When you're cold, the body shunts blood away from the extremities to pre-serve warmth to your core and brain. That irritates your hands, making them more sensitive." Irritable and sensitive? Finally, a medical reason to explain why our girlfriends get so crabby in the winter!

Bar Trivia

$2,500 Amount of money Pablo Escobar's Medellín cartel was spending a month on rubber bands just to hold all their cash together in the '80s.

14 Number of liters an adult can sweat every day. Hot!

$5 Cost of the correspondence course Ben and Jerry took to learn how to make ice cream and, by extension, heal your broken heart.

Jokes

A nurse walks into a bank totally exhausted after an 18-hour shift. She grabs a deposit slip, pulls a rectal thermometer out of her purse, and tries to write with it. When she realizes her mistake, she looks at the flabbergasted teller and, without missing a beat, says, "Well, that's great...some asshole's got my pen." —ROBERT NASHWICK

Grandpa's Dirty Joke

To deliver it like Paw-Paw, tell it loudly while you eat cottage cheese.

A blonde goes to the dry cleaner to have her sweater cleaned. She asks the clerk, "How much?" He doesn't hear her and says, "Come again?" She giggles and says, "No...it's just mustard this time."

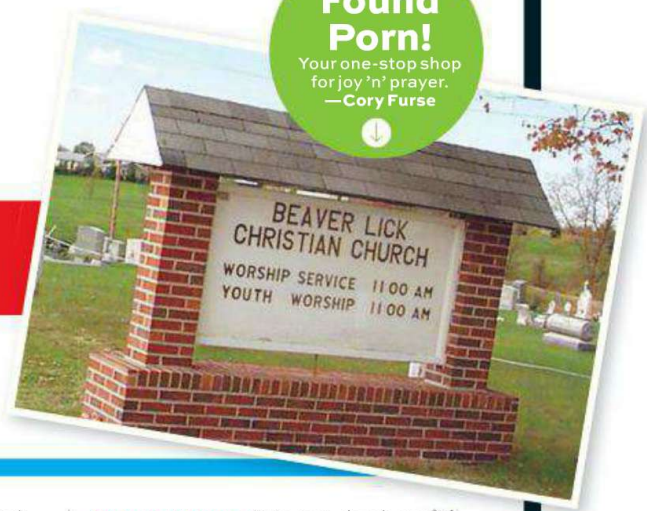

Q: What do you see when the Pillsbury Doughboy bends over?
A: Doughnuts. —R. M. BROWN

How To

Use Your Stick

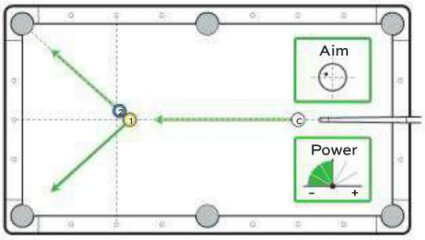

Billiards hottie and former Women's Ultimate Trickshot Challenge finalist SHANELLE LORAINE shows you how to hustle chumps for fun and profit.

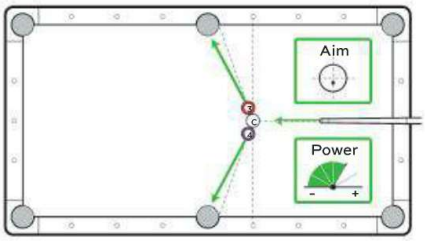

Trick 1: Place the 2-ball on the dot and the 1-ball in front of it, touching ("freezing the ball"). Remove the 2 and freeze it against the 1 in line with the top of the left corner pocket. From the other side of the table, place the cue ball two dots up in the middle and strike it on the top left with medium speed at the 1. The balls will rocket to the corner pockets.

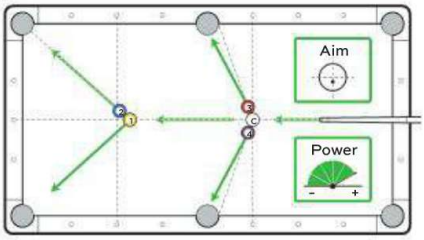

Trick 2: Place cue ball three dots up and in the middle. Freeze the 3-ball to the cue ball in line with the right tip of the top side pocket. Do the same with the 4 on the opposite side. Stroke the cue ball just below center to sink balls in opposite side pockets. Practice the ball positioning in advance so you look casual placing them.

Trick 3: Here's the money shot. Set up the 1- and 2-balls as in Trick 1 and the 3-, 4-, and cue balls as in Trick 2. Make a firm stroke and watch all four balls drop into their appointed pockets! You shoot a good stick, Fast Eddie.

Keep up with Shanelle at facebook.com/shanellefanpage.

How To

The least sexy pillow fight is about to break out.

This Is the End hits theaters June 14.

Prepare for the Apocalypse

This Is the End's CRAIG ROBINSON tries his best to keep you alive.

DON'T GO TO FRANCO'S
"In the movie we stay at James Franco's place, but I'd go to Chuck Norris' house, because once the apocalypse got there it would be called the apoca-Chuck."

CHOOSE YOUR COMPANIONS WISELY
"I'd like to be with my family, but eventually I would need to have some sex, so hopefully my cousin Sharice will be there."

CONSULT OTHERS
"I would stock up on water, beans, a can opener, and weed lollipops. I wouldn't even think of a flashlight unless someone reminded me."

DEFEND YOURSELF
"I'd attach scythes to my arms and roll around. You also need some Al Green in case you have to seduce any aliens."

MAKE YOUR LAST MOMENTS COUNT
"Tell your wife you love her, then go make love to the girl you always wanted to."

Talk Like a Carny

Thinking of running away with the circus? Retired clown WAYNE KEYSER shares some inside lingo.

Circus Headache
A real ailment caused by prolonged exposure to the ammonia fumes given off by animal waste.

Horse Feed
Poor returns from crappy business.

Rubbermen
Strolling balloon vendors.

Forty Milers
Newcomers to carnival life who will quit before they get farther than 40 miles away from home.

DIETING SUCKS!

THAT'S WHY THE SCIENTISTS AT MHP DEVELOPED DOPAMITE

DOPAMITE is a powerful dopaminergic fat burning catalyst that doesn't only increase energy and thermogenesis, it gets to the core of what gets you shredded – YOUR DIET! DOPAMITE's effects are driven by dopamine, a potent neurotransmitter that controls the brain's "reward system" and activates feelings of motivation and pleasure. This system is also called the "fat burning control center" because it helps control eating behavior, crushes food cravings and makes you feel motivated. Thermogenics aren't enough – take control of your diet and get shredded with DOPAMITE.

DOPAMITE – DIETING JUST GOT EASIER!

How To

Uh-oh, it's the old dick-in-the-popcorn-bucket trick!

1. Gobbling turkey at the Wild Turkey 81 Eating World Championship, 2011. 2. Sucking down wieners at the 2011 Nathan's Famous Hot Dog Eating Contest qualifier. 3. Whacking his gut at the 2008 Cannoli Eating Contest.

Eat Like a Champion

Record-setting competitive eater CRAZY LEGS CONTI on how to train your mind, body, and gag reflex.

TRAIN YOUR MIND

"Some competitive eaters say yoga helps with digestion, but for me it's about the mind-body connection. I'm able to concentrate more and stay in the zone. Sometimes I'm eating in front of 40,000 people. There are topless women and competitors to my left and right; you have to ignore all that and focus on your plate alone. Being reflective in yoga and holding poses is helpful for that."

TRAIN YOUR STOMACH

"Watching what you eat year-round is important. If I eat French toast 11 days in a row during the off-season, that's not going to help me. Right before a contest, I eat a lot of soft, malleable foods. Japanese ramen soup is great because it fills you up, but it's lower in calories and your body can digest it easily. Post-contest I'm not the best role model: I'll smoke a victory cigar and have a beer to celebrate."

RUN!

"I've run two marathons, which didn't interfere with my eating regimen. Most people wouldn't eat 200 dumplings before the New York Marathon, but for me it was fun to see the limitations of my stomach and my hamstrings. When I ran Boston, I was in a Nathan's qualifier. I ate 21 hot dogs and ran the 26.2 miles the next day. I found that 21 in both miles and hot dogs is kind of the breaking point."

TRY TO LOOK OK

"I'll go to the gym a few times a week for 45 minutes, just to work on my vanity muscles and look at girls in spandex. Competitive eater Tim 'Eater X' Janus is a real gym rat, and he's found that sometimes he can feel his stomach expand against his six-pack, and it's an uncomfortable tightness. So I try to stay with the pony keg. I have about two abs that are visible, and that works for me."

Heather first floored us as Corey Haim's object of desire in the 1988 teen comedy License to Drive. (More like License to Drive Us Wild, right?) More than two decades and many memorable films later, from Swingers to Boogie Nights to Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me, she hit Vegas to play Jade, a stripper/call girl/clue in the mystery of Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms, and Zach Galifianakis' mind-bending weekend. The Wolfpack has once again reunited and find themselves in another serious bind in The Hangover Part III. We caught up with Heather to chat about revisiting Jade, her costars, and a very special pair of skates.

Amanda Keidan

So how did you find out you would be reprising the role of Jade?
[Director-writer-producer] Todd Phillips sent me an e-mail! It was really fun to see everyone again; it felt a little like a reunion. Everything's different in a way, because the movies they've done since the first Hangover have all been so successful, but everything's also exactly the same.

Does the Wolfpack get in touch for Hangover-style benders now and then?
I never drink, so I doubt that they would be calling me if they were. I'm so tame.

Hangover* plots are among Hollywood's best-kept secrets. What's it like to know what everyone wants to?
They wouldn't let me read the script at first, and when they did it was top secret! They have me so paranoid about saying anything; it's like being in the CIA or something.

Was it different playing Jade another time around?
Night and day. My character is completely different and in a totally different circumstance. She's not a stripper anymore.

We heard you thought it would be fun if Jade got pregnant and did a lap dance. Are you bummed you missed your chance?
I still wanna do that! Wouldn't that be funny? So disturbing.

Being on set with folks like Zach, Ed, and Ken "Chow" Jeong, have there been any moments you just lost it?
In a movie you do it over and over, so at a certain point, even if you were laughing, when you've done it six times, you're not anymore. But you know that one line that Zach has in the first Hangover where he goes, "I didn't know they gave out rings at the Holocaust"? That one makes me laugh so hard. It's so stupid.

Hangover Part III*'s tagline is "It all ends." Really?
They say that, but you never know. In five years maybe they'll be like, "Let's make another bajillion dollars. I spent all that money!" But Todd probably can't spend all that money because he made a lot.

So you don't really party much now, but do you have any crazy Vegas stories?
I'm not really a big Vegas person. I'm more, "Let me go to a yoga retreat and do yoga three hours a day." I've definitely gone and partied, but I kind of hate Vegas, to be honest. It's kind of disgusting.

How do you feel about guys doing yoga to get girls?
I mean, if it gets them into yoga and they're better human beings from it...There are so many hot girls wearing tight clothes, so if guys are pervy, it can make it really uncomfortable.

Have you donned a pair of roller skates since playing Rollergirl in Boogie Nights?
There was a roller rink party I went to a few years ago, and I fell. Someone was like, "Oh, my God. Rollergirl just wiped out!" I also have a pair from the movie in an alcove at my house, but I haven't put them on in a while.

n the day of her Maxim shoot, Jessica Clark posted a photo on Instagram featuring a rack filled with teeny bikinis and the caption, "Today's wardrobe ;)" The winky emoticon, we assume, means, "Ha! These suckers think this is skimpy?" Because Jessica is used to wearing much less on True Blood, where she plays vampire goddess Lilith. The neck-biting beauty hasn't worn a stitch of clothing since she first appeared in Season 5, rising from a puddle of blood covered in a thin layer of platelets. Will her wardrobe be similar in Season 6? Randy phlebotomists are crossing their fingers!

Did you have any qualms about being nude on TV?
I'm not particularly body-conscious. I was pretty comfortable the entire time, but there was a flash of nerves on my first day of filming. It was a completely packed set, and I had to throw off the robe, and it was like, "Hi, first day at the office!" I literally had to show up to work naked.

We're not sure how to ask this politely, but was pubic hairstyle an issue?
There was a lot of discussion about grooming. Lilith is primeval. There's no landing strip or vagazzaling, so, yeah, the second phone call I got was like, "We need to talk about pubic hair." They asked if I would be OK with maybe growing it out, but it was concluded that I was unlikely to reach such fulsome portion without a merkin.

So you have a crotch wig?
That's a merkin, yeah. But then it was funny because they went back and forth on the specific grooming of the merkin as well. I even had a fitting for it.

How do they go about covering you in blood?
They spray-paint a base coat, then apply different layers. It takes three to four hours and two special-effects artists. It's quite an endeavor.

Must be a bitch to get it off, too.
I shower off as much as I can, and then the makeup artist comes in and scrubs me down with oils. Then we have three or four more go-rounds of that. We've gotten to know each other on a whole 'nother level.

Have you ever missed a spot and freaked somebody out?
One time I had this big streak of blood coming from my ear. My neighbor was like, "Oh, my God, you have to go to the hospital! You have a head injury!" And because I hadn't yet appeared on the show and everything was secret, I couldn't say why it was there.

Why do you think so many people are turned on by vampires?
I guess it's like a sexual, intimate thing to bite and be bitten and be drained. It's not my particular fetish, but I definitely get it.

Have you ever worn your fangs to bed?
No, your teeth stay on set. Probably because they know we'd do things like that.

Time travel at the speed of a 1935 Speedster?

The 1930s brought unprecedented innovation in machine-age technology and materials. Industrial designers from the auto industry translated the principles of aerodynamics and streamlining into everyday objects like radios and toasters. It was also a decade when an unequaled variety of watch cases and movements came into being. In lieu of hands to tell time, one such complication, called a jumping mechanism, utilized numerals on a disc viewed through a window. With its striking resemblance to the dashboard gauges and radio dials of the decade, the jump hour watch was indeed "in tune" with the times!

The Stauer 1930s Dashtronic deftly blends the modern functionality of a 21-jewel automatic movement and 3-ATM water resistance with the distinctive, retro look of a jumping display (not an actual jumping complication). The stainless steel 1 1/2" case is complemented with a black alligator-embossed leather band. The band is 9 1/2" long and will fit a 7–8 1/2" diameter wrist.

True to Machine Art esthetics, the sleek brushed stainless steel case is clear on the back, allowing a peek at the inner workings.

Try the Stauer 1930s Dashtronic Watch for 30 days and if you are not receiving compliments, please return the watch for a full refund of the purchase price. If you have an appreciation for classic design with precision accuracy, the 1930s Dashtronic Watch is built for you. This watch is a limited edition, so please act quickly. by ED CONDRAN illustrations by JAMES BENNETT

THE JOKER

Attention, members of the Red Sox locker room: Don't start a prank war with starter Ryan Dempster.

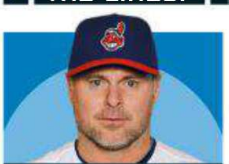

What's the greatest practical joke you've ever played?
Someone on the Cubs froze Will Ohman's spikes in a bucket, and no one owned up to it. And even though I didn't do it, I said I did just to see how Will would get back at me. So Will did typical stuff, like superglue my zipper and put eye black on the rim of my cap so it would end up on my forehead. After that I had a chance to really get him back.

What did you do?
I got some cameramen together and made up this story that there was a documentary being shot on left-handed relievers, and they were coming to see Will. Who'd watch a documentary on lefty relievers? Anyway, I got all four tires off his car and hid them around the ballpark. As he was being interviewed, I said, "Hey, Will, isn't that your tire in the outfield?" He turned around and wasn't too happy.

How'd you start doing the Harry Caray impression?
I was a fan of his for a long time. One of my favorite stories is from way before there was a kiss cam, and Harry was talking about a couple that was constantly kissing. He said [Harry Caray voice], "And he kisses her on the strikes, and she kisses him on the balls." [laughs]. He was awesome.

THE LINEUP

JASON GIAMBI
Cleveland Indians
Designated Hitter

Where do you draw the line between superstitious and crazy? Ask the Giambino, who's admitted that he breaks out a golden thong when in a slump...then shares it with teammates. Now try to erase that mental image.

DEREK HOLLAND
Texas Rangers
Starting Pitcher

Forget Holland's mid-90s heat. The dude's 'stache has its own Twitter account, last season's mullet put Billy Ray Cyrus' to shame, and his nickname is the Dutch Oven (which is better than the Cleveland Steamer, but still).

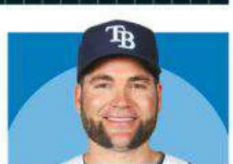

TIM LINCECUM
San Francisco Giants
Starting Pitcher

You've gotta love the Freak, whether it's his Gumby-like windup, his old Professor Snape hair, or the physique that makes him look like Mitch from Dazed and Confused. He's a Gumby-Snape-Mitch mutant! And God bless him for it.

A.J. PIERZYNSKI
Texas Rangers
Catcher

The frosted-tipped backstop has allegedly kneed a trainer in the nuts, he's fought as a pro wrestler, and his ex-manager Ozzie Guillen said, "If you play against him, you hate him. If you play with him, you hate him a little less." Aw.

LUKE SCOTT
Tampa Bay Rays
1B, DH, OF

We're not sure what's the scariest thing about Scott. The military-grade arsenal, the survivalist tendencies, the birther politics, or the Wolverine-style chops. At least he no longer packs heat when he heads to the ballpark.

THE MOTORMOUTH

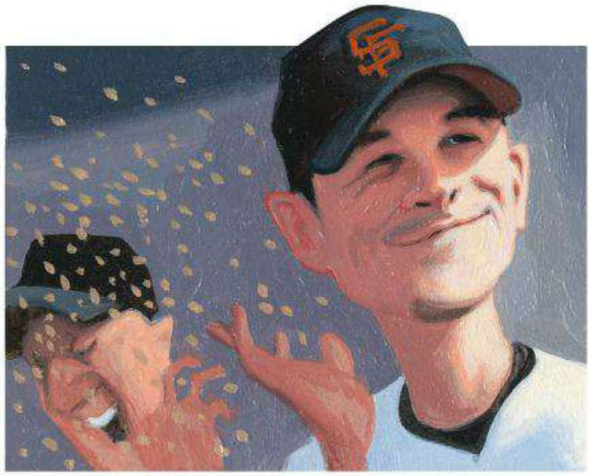

Giants outfielder Hunter Pence was nicknamed the Reverend for his over-the-top pep talks. His secret?

What was going through your head during the Giants' postseason push?
I just lost my mind. I would talk about it with Brian Wilson, who'd say, "We're getting outhit, outpitched; let's do something!" So I started a parade. I'm not saying that's why we won, and it might have looked crazy to fans and everybody else, but crazy worked for us. We're the World Series champions. It's not weird if it works.

Why would a grown man making millions of dollars take a motorized scooter to work instead of a limo?
Our chef, of all people, custom-builds these scooters, and they're awesome. Wilson has one, and Marco Scutaro has one. It's hard to drive in San Francisco, but there are bike lanes everywhere, so I try to take advantage of it.

How did you come up with the craziest stance in baseball?
Everyone hits differently. I might look kind of unusual, but the bottom line is, does it work? My swings have always been made fun of. But the joke was when the Astros signed me. Fortunately they didn't mess with my swing.

THE MERRY PRANKSTER

There's a reason they call Giants infielder Ryan Theriot "the Riot." (It's not just his last name.)

How do you loosen up your teammates?
I grab a bag of sunflower seeds in the dugout and spill them all over someone intensely watching the game. It's hilarious. Matt Cain didn't like it very much, so I did it to him almost every day. Even when you were showering after the game, you would find sunflower seeds on your body no matter how much you shook them off.

How did guys get pumped during the Series?
It was easy because of Hunter Pence's speeches. What I'd do when he was done was fire Swedish Fish, gum, Skittles, and chunks of granola bars up in the air on the players. The floor of the dugout was like bar gravy. I'd throw stuff toward the people in the first row behind the dugout. Those people got to eat for free.

What were you going to do if the World Series went back to San Francisco?
I was going to make it rain after Hunter's speech. I was going to throw Monopoly money and a lot of dollar bills on the players and on the people in the front row. I'll do it this season if I get back to the World Series.

THE LINEUP

CARLOS ZAMBRANO
Miami Marlins
Starting Pitcher

He was voted baseball's meanest pitcher: After giving up five homers to the Braves in 2011, he fired two balls at Chipper Jones, then bolted, cleaned out his locker, and "retired." For two whole days.

BRANDON McCARTHY
Arizona Diamondbacks
Starting Pitcher

After fracturing his skull, the hilarious hurler had this to say: "Well, if being discharged from the hospital isn't the best time to ask about a threesome, then I'm fresh out of ideas." His wife was not amused.

R.A. DICKEY
Toronto Blue Jays
Starting Pitcher

R.A. not only has the craziest pitch in the game but reads books and stuff, too. Nutty! Even weirder? Risking his 2012 salary to climb Kilimanjaro. He went on to win the Cy Young, so maybe the altitude did him good.

ALEX RODRIGUEZ
New York Yankees
Third Baseman

Where to start? The rumored centaur self-portrait? Trying to pick up fans? During the playoffs? While in a slump? But the craziest thing may be his latest alleged PED scandal. Did he learn nothing the first time?

C.J. WILSON
Los Angeles Angels
Starting Pitcher

It's one thing to go straight-edge if you are an ugly, broke punk rocker. Quite another if you're a handsome ace making $16 mil per year. No booze, no drugs, no sleeping around? Could be the oddest man in pro sports.

THE GLUTTON

All Brewers closer John Axford needs is a deep-fried butter stick and a nearby urinal.

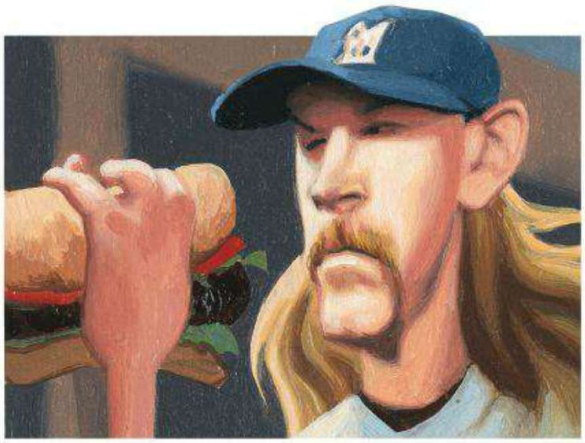

What's your pregame ritual?
I go to the bathroom and get rid of all of my nervous pee. And then, just before I hit the field, I grab two pieces of Big Red gum. I need to put something in my mouth.

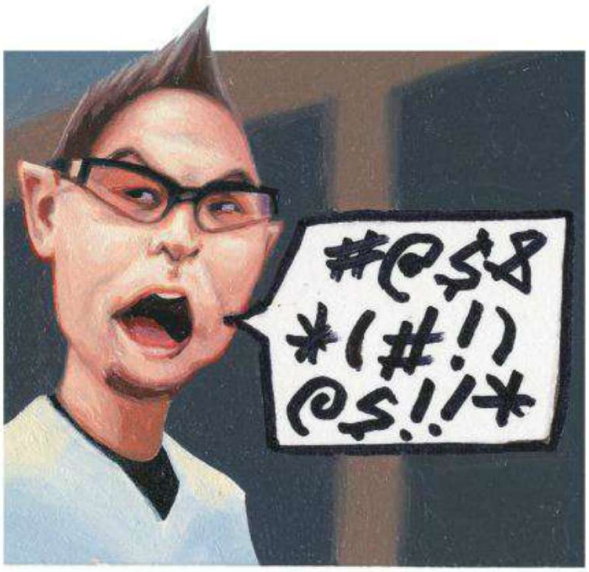

Um, OK. For a skinny guy, you've got an interesting diet. Any staples?
The Krispy Kreme burger. You have a burger in a Krispy Kreme donut with cheese and chocolate-covered bacon. It's very good.

Sounds healthy.
I pitch in Milwaukee—what do you want? At the state fairs I'll tweet out to fans that if they get me a Krispy Kreme burger or deep-friend cheese curds, I'll trade them tickets. If you're really feeling it, you go for the deep-fried butter stick.

You've had more mustache looks than the Village People.
Yeah, I've had it all, the Fu Man, the waxed, the chopper.

What's most intimidating?
I don't think it's the look as much as the pitch. I have no fear when I get out there. I just let her rip once I get rid of all my nervous pee.

THE ANIMAL

Easygoing off the field, Twins starter Vance Worley is a beast once he steps on the mound.

You're constantly talking on the field. For those of us who can't read lips, what are you saying?
It'll be "motherfuck" this, "motherfuck" that. One game last year I was really talking out there. "Motherfuck, shit, fuck." I was striking out a bunch of guys, and the guys in the other dugout were whining about me talking. Fucking babies.

Do you play mind games with opposing hitters?
Yes. One of the guys I've had these games with is [the Mets'] Ruben Tejada, who is a really good player. I've faced him a lot in the minors and with the Phillies. Last April he came up, and I remember thinking, Take this motherfucker. I hit 94 mph on the gun, which I'd never done before. That was a lot of fun.

What kind of impact do all your antics have on the batter?
I think it helps. The more lippy I get, the more these guys probably think, Is this fucker crazy or what?

THE LINEUP

JONATHON PAPELBON
Philadelphia Phillies
Relief Pitcher

The Phils' closer has said he gets so worked up during games that he goes half-blind. He can't sleep. He grinds his teeth. He gets paralyzing headaches. He seems like such a prick that we're fine with all of it.

BRIAN WILSON
San Francisco Giants
Relief Pitcher

Is the Beard legitimately insane or just crazy like a fox? And do we care? No player is funnier than the spandex-tuxedoed "certified ninja," who keeps a leather-clad gimp dubbed the Machine on call. Fear the Beard!

NYJER MORGAN
Yokohama DeNA BayStars
Outfielder

The man known as Tony Plush has thrown balls at fans, charged the mound, and yelled obscenities on live TV. We love the guy, but we can't say we're surprised he's playing in Japan in 2013. Come back Tony!

ICHIRO SUZUKI
New York Yankees
Outfielder

The greatest Japanese player ever gets his spot purely for his Yogi Berra–level words of wisdom. While the language barrier may be to blame, we have a sneaking suspicion Ichiro's been fucking with us all along.

FERNANDO RODNEY
Tampa Bay Rays
Relief Pitcher

His hat's crookeder than a D.C. lobbyist, his fastball has more heat than a Spring Breakers cast party, and his 0.60 ERA last year was skimpier than Giambi's gold lamé thong. Sorry for the visual (again)!

> In Swingers we weren't trying to come up with catchphrases. These were things we said in real life.

ICON

Vince Vaughn

The fast-talking writer and star of The Internship on life, movies, and fake orphans. By Dan Bova

You wrote and star in this movie about two washed-up salesmen who enter the internship program at Google. How did you get the idea?
I saw a 60 Minutes piece on Google as a place to work. It was such a foreign concept from what I understood as a regular job. There's free food, sleeping pods, Ping-Pong. I'm the kind of guy who likes to get involved in everything–I'd be all over the Ping-Pong. I also thought, Unfortunately there are a lot of people currently losing jobs, and things are moving in different directions. So a lot of older people are finding themselves unemployed and without the necessary skill set that is in demand now. It's this: Oh, gosh, where do I land? So I'm really proud of this movie. I feel like it's really a movie of this moment we live in.

How did Google react to the idea?
I wrote the first draft very quickly, and then I went to Google. It was important to me that we could use the name of a company that really exists instead of coming up with a fake company. They were welcoming and willing to have a sense of humor about themselves. But they didn't finance the movie; there was no product placement in the movie.

Are you a tech-savvy kind of guy?
No. I didn't own a cell phone for a long time. I was late in the game on that.

How late?
Maybe two years ago I got a cell phone.

Really?
Once my wife was pregnant, I got one. For me I always enjoyed my time not being able to be reached. I was never in such a hurry to be on the phone. I'd see people on the phone all the time, and it starts to seem like you're a hamster on a wheel. So I'm not a big gadget guy. When I write, I'll do the whole thing by hand, and then I'll put it into the computer.

Do you ever Google yourself?
No.

There are at least 10 people on Twitter who claim to be you. We're guessing you're not one of them?
No. Some people really like to get into Twitter, but it's not my thing.

You're responsible for some of the most quotable lines in cinematic history. What do people quote back to you the most?
Probably lines from Swingers–"You're so money" and "beautiful babies"–but I can tell you we weren't trying to come up with catchphrases. These were things we said and exaggerated in the script because we thought they were fun for a character to say. There was no understanding or handicapping that this could be more.

Our favorite thing you've said on camera is, "Dorothy Mantooth is a saint!" That's not really a question; we just felt the need to share that with you.
Well, thank you.

So in The Internship you and Owen Wilson have pretty not-so-great jobs before you get canned. Have you had any shit jobs in your life?
For sure, yes. When I was in high school, I had a telemarketing gig where you would sell tickets to this Lake County Sheriff's police rodeo, and you would call and say the family package would be $20 for four. They'd say, "Oh, well, we're not interested in the rodeo," and you'd say, "Oh, that's OK. Would you like to send an orphan to the rodeo?" And they would sometimes say yes, they would be happy to cough up $5 to send an orphan to a rodeo. We all sat around this big table, and there was an old guy running the place who would always disappear in the back room for hours with a girl. You never knew what was going on. Every week there would be new people there. Years later I started thinking about it; I thought, Were there that many orphans in Lake County? I'm not saying that there weren't, but I started to get wise and think maybe there wasn't a rodeo. At the time I was excited to get a job, but I look back and say I can't stand getting a call from the telemarketer.

So you've done comedies and drama. Is there any chance we will see you in one of your buddy Jon Favreau's comic book movies?
Not anytime soon. I like those films. I would never say never, but there are no plans in the future.

Any parting words?
Dorothy Mantooth is a saint.

AMERICA'S PREEMINENT EATER ON
WHAT TO SHOVE IN YOUR MOUTH
AFTER YOU DRINK YOUR FACE OFF.

photograph by ROBERT CASS

I think if you look at the landscape of dining right now, the hottest restaurants—the hardest to get into—are serving "chef menus," meaning menus that represent what chefs want to eat after work. So in a lot of ways, that sort of stoner food/ drinking food has become the late-night go-to. Stuff that helps sop up the liquor, that's what's hot. And that's a very good thing.

Kung Pao Pastrami at Mission Chinese Food

Barbecued Baby Pig at Great N.Y. Noodletown

RED SCARE

→ For chefs the number one late-night drunken cuisine is really spicy Chinese food. That's the absolute top of the list. Intensely flavored, really spicy stuff that appeals to jaded palates, sops up the liquor, and wakes you up. At least enough to get you home. The all-time classic is Great N.Y. Noodletown in Chinatown, but if you're looking for an example of this new kind of food, you can hardly do better than Mission Chinese Food in San Francisco and New York. This is food that's designed from the get-go to scare the evil out of you: It's just a whole new dimension of sadomasochistically delicious pain. Not all of it is spicy, but when it is, it's uncompromising, unrelenting, and merciless. I've been with one chef who wasn't prepared, and he had to get up and run to the bathroom. It was just too much for him. But what's interesting is that even after that first painful experience, you wake up the next day craving it like a junkie. It's addictive.

BURGER KINGS

→ Literally, the first thing I do when I land in Los Angeles—before I even go to the hotel—is stop at the airport In-N-Out Burger, and chances are that on the way out I'm grabbing another one. In New York the closest thing is Shake Shack, which I love. I go twice a week. It's a great burger prepared fresh by people who give a shit. And that's huge! The best high-end burger I've had in a long time was at Holeman & Finch in Atlanta. They make only two dozen each night at 10, then they ring a bell, and the first lucky customers get them. They're not fancy; there's no mango-tomato fucking relish on them. They understand that what's so glorious about a great American hamburger is good meat, a good bun, and no bullshit.

EAT YOUR VEGETABLES

→ Believe it or not, there is a place for vegetables in late-night eating; it's just a question of finding chefs who can get really intense flavors out of them: guys in New York like Alex Stupak at the Empellón Cocina, who does some amazing things with carrots, or David Chang at Momofuku, with his Brussels sprouts. The thing about veggies, though, is they'd better not be bland. One of the things that's pushed people toward Chinese cuisine is the ratio of meat to carbs and vegetables. We're talking about 20 percent protein mixed with noodles, veggies, rice, or all of the above. You don't want to take on a 24 oz. porterhouse and then roll into bed. That might lead to a colon-related mishap.

VEGAS VICTUALS

→ It's easy to look at Vegas and say, "I don't like it or respect it," but the fact is the people who have chosen to do business there are not fucking around. You go to Craftsteak, you're going to get a great steak. Bouchon is terrific, even the room service. The food in Vegas is a hell of a lot better than anything in Times Square.

SLICE OF LIFE

→ To me the perfect slice of pizza is the New York utility slice that you can eat while you're walking down the street. The slice can't be too hot or you get that tectonic cheese slide that's slightly disturbing and possibly disfiguring. A big hunk of molten cheese sliding onto your crotch is not good.

KEEP ON TRUCKIN'

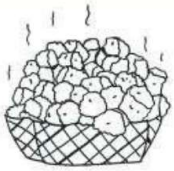

→ No matter how entertaining it is to make fun of food trucks, we need more of them. You'd have a hard time arguing that Roy Choi's Kogi trucks in L.A. haven't made the world a better place. I'd much rather see people eating some pork belly on a steamed bun than giving money to the King, the Clown, or the Colonel.

FRIED CHEESE CURDS
Laura Leu Senior Editor
"Cheese curds, Wisconsin's state fruit, are delicious enough in their natural form. But when they're dipped in beer batter and fried, they become the perfect booze sponge. Mozzarella sticks don't hold a candle."

THAI FIGHTERS

→ One of the things we look for when we're doing our show is not "What's the best restaurant in town?"—or the hippest—but what's the go-to food for people who have had too much to drink? Often that's Asian food, and two of the places that do it best are Pok Pok in Portland, Oregon and New York City, and Night + Market in L.A. They're both basically Thai street food that's been elevated to another level, and they're unapologetic about it.

WELCOME TO WIENERVILLE

→ Everyone loves a hot dog, and they appear in various permutations everywhere we go on the show: strange, totally fucked-up takes on the hot dog. And I think the more the culture drinks, the wilder the variations get. In Sweden they wrap them in flatbread with shrimp salad and mashed potatoes. In Finland they serve them with mayonnaise, chopped pineapple, and ketchup. As for more typical dogs, you can never go wrong with a classic griddled New York dog from Gray's Papaya or Papaya King. One of those will definitely make you feel better about the world.

Two Dogs at Gray's Papaya

TURNING JAPANESE

→ Some of the best places for late-night eats are Japanese izakayas–basically beer- and sake-friendly spots that serve casual food. They're not sushi bars; rather, they serve grilled or fried snacks, like yakitori. Small portions, where you can eat a lot of them. Totoraku in L.A. is a great one. It's drinking food.

BIG EASY EATS

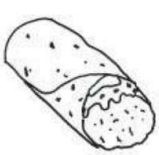

→ Since New Orleans is such a nightlife town, it's a good thing there are so many great food options. Take Verti Marte, for instance, a takeout deli in the French Quarter that's open 24 hours a day, so you call out for a bottle of bourbon, a muffuletta sandwich, and a carton of Parliaments at 4 A.M., and they'll deliver.

OH, CANADA

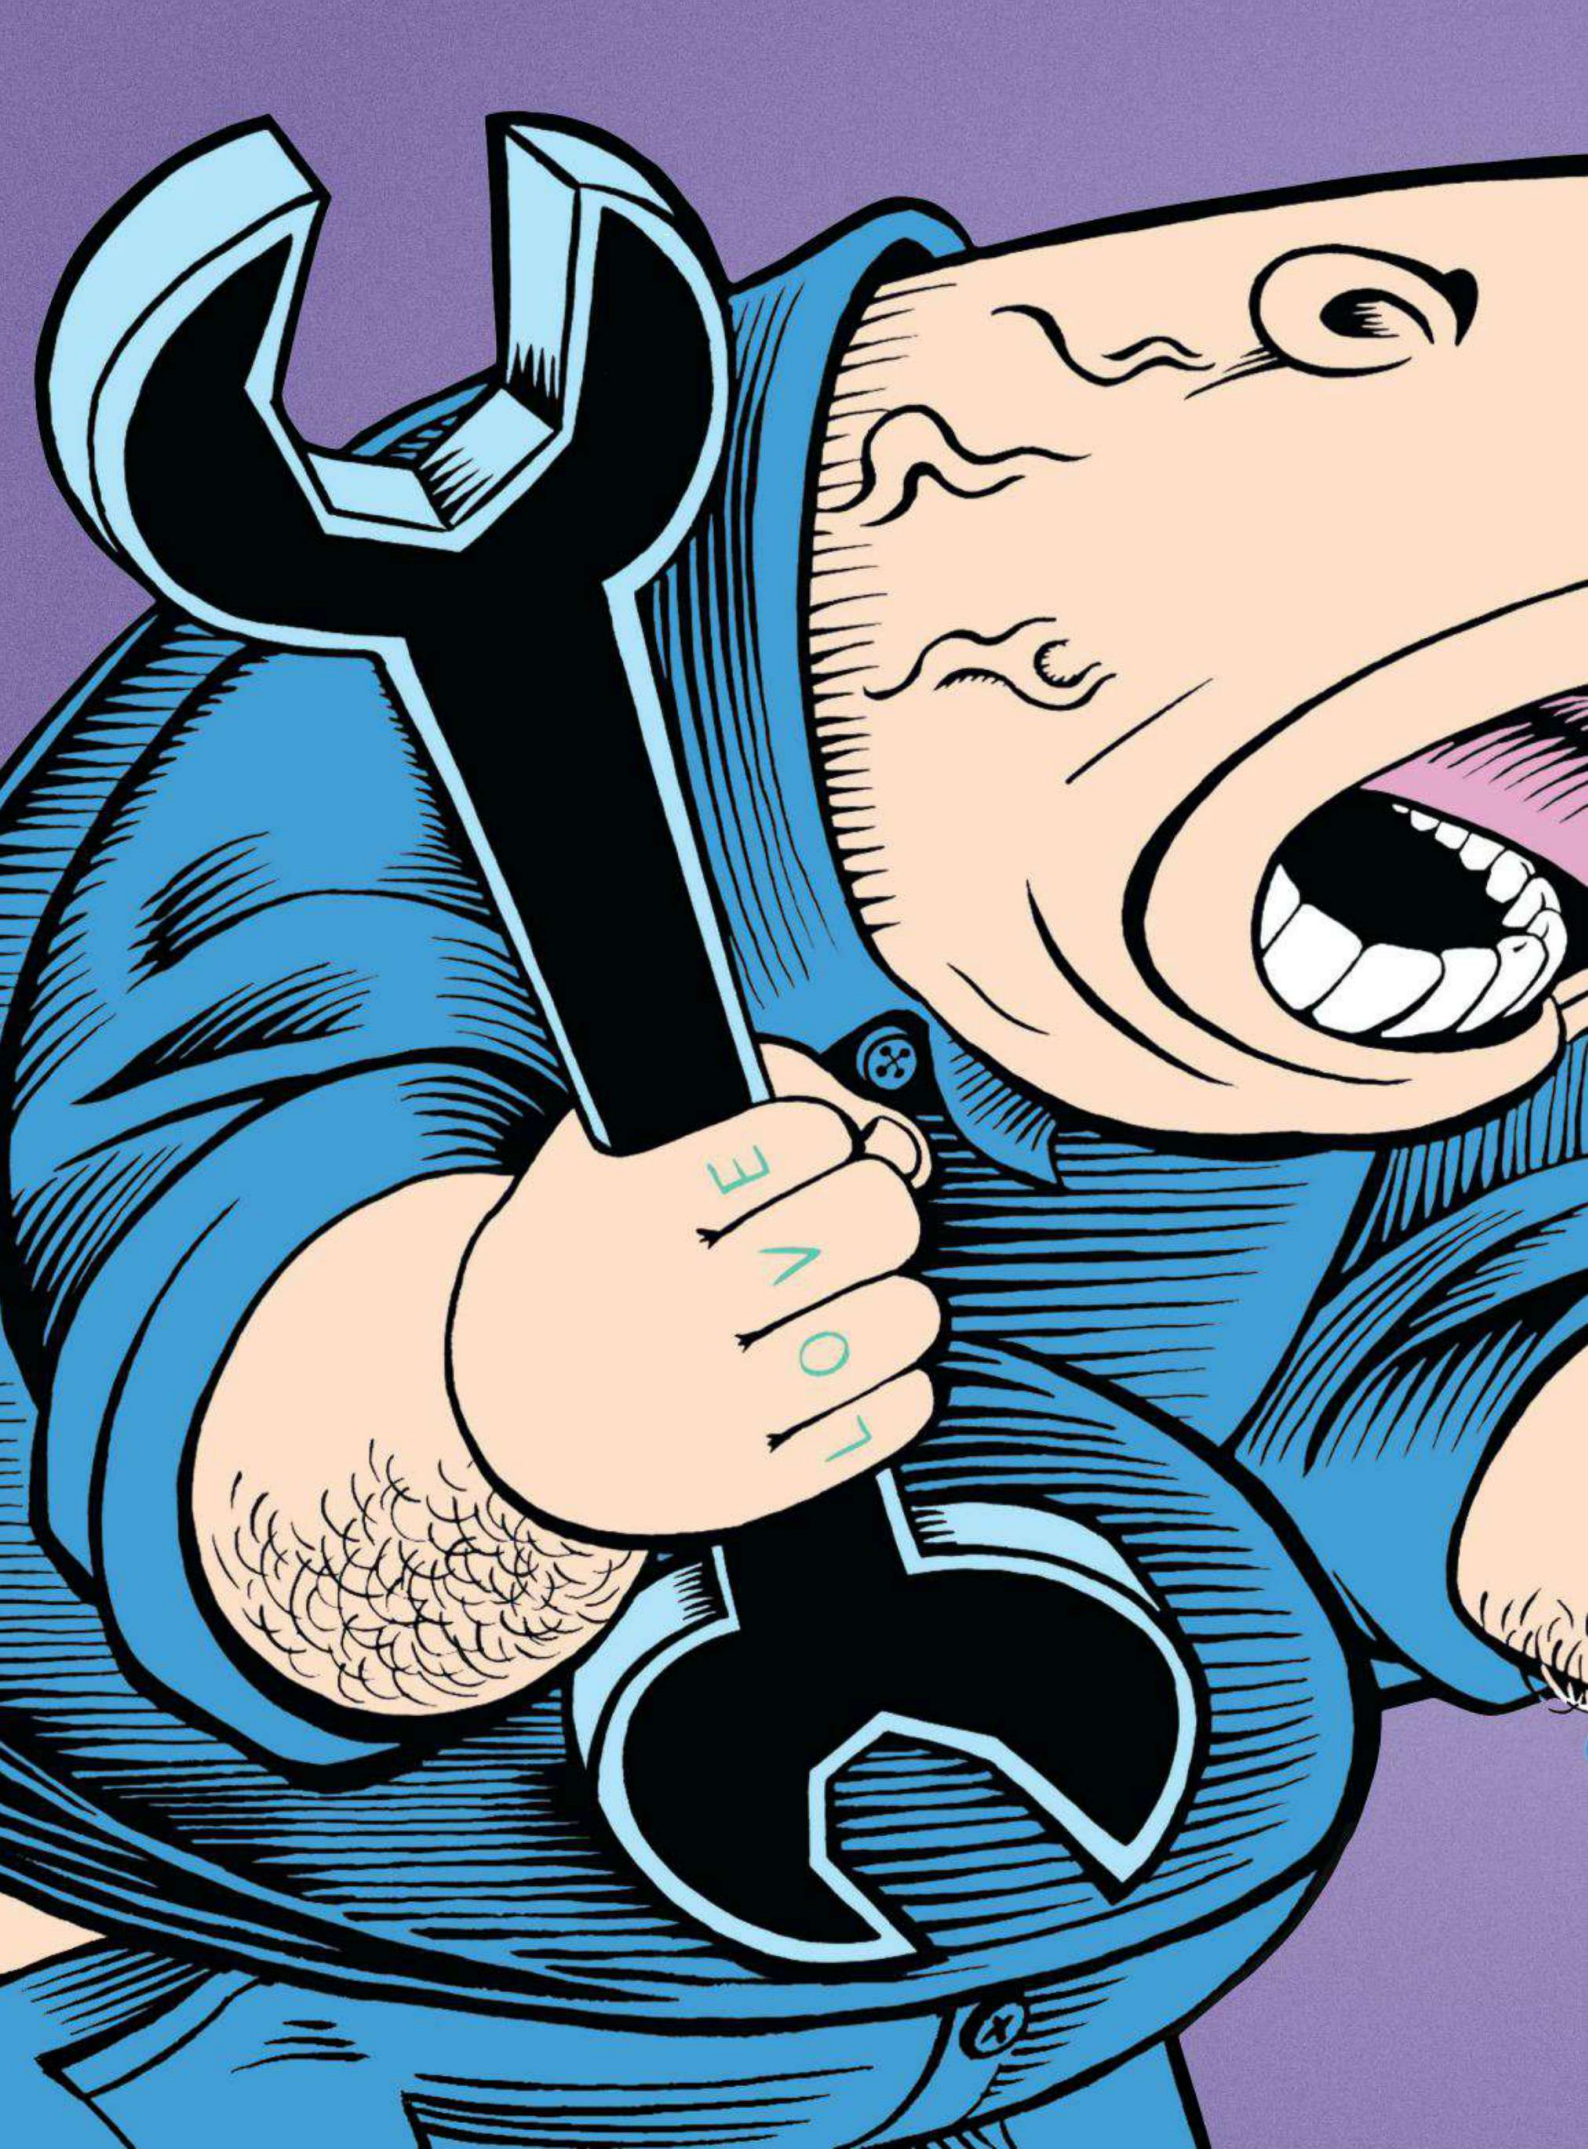

→ In many ways poutine from Quebec is the perfect late-night drinking dish: There are French fries, gravy, and cheese. It's a deadly, deadly dish: It probably has a bad effect on the underpinnings of our society. It's morally indefensible, but also quite delicious. Joe Beef in Montréal does a great one.

"The sane wouldn't go near this beast in the clear light of day, but fresh out of the industrial microwave post-last-call it's a savory explosion of sodium and spice."

DINER BREAKFAST

"There's no skimping on anything here. You need eggs, bacon, sausage, toast, pancakes, hash browns, coffee, water, and an extra-large orange juice. By the time you're done, you'll almost be sober."

THE JERKY BOYS?

Johnny Brennan remembers the best meatloaf he ever tasted. It was tender, not too dry, and he ate it the one time he was nominated for a Grammy.

It was March 1995, and Johnny and Kamal Ahmed, together known as the Jerky Boys, were at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles, up for Best Comedy Album. In a few short years–long before Napster, Facebook, or YouTube–bootleg cassettes of their hilarious and vulgar prank phone calls turned into platinum-selling albums. Without really trying, they'd created a market for phony calls and legitimized them as a comedic genre.

One month earlier they'd starred in their own feature film, The Jerky Boys: The Movie, a semibiographical tale about two "lowlifes" from Queens who crank the wrong mobster. The Jerky Boys 2–their prank call pièce de résistance–debuted at No. 12 on Billboard's pop chart and was up for a Grammy that night. During the movie's advertising blitz, two Jerky Boys albums (including the movie soundtrack) appeared on the Billboard charts at the same time. Jim Carrey, Steven Seagal, and Radiohead (who named their debut album, Pablo Honey, after a Jerky Boys call) were all big fans. Life was good.

As they sat eating the best meatloaf ever, Kamal released a wild scream, pretended he was stabbed, and flung his food in every direction. "He was fucking with everybody. Security was going to throw him out," recalls Johnny, now 51 and looking more like the reserved father he is than the shaggy prankster of his heyday. "When people realized Kamal was OK, they burst out laughing."

Even though they were the center of attention, Sam Kinison won the Grammy posthumously for Live From Hell. Kamal went immediately to the bar; Johnny said he felt they'd been "stiffed." Still the night wasn't a total bummer. Sheryl Crow told Johnny she played his tapes on her tour bus, and Kamal hung out with Pamela Anderson and Mötley Crüe. It wasn't all bad. Until it was.

By 1999 arguments over money disconnected the Jerky Boys' phone line for good. Kamal quit the group to pursue filmmaking, and Johnny went solo, becoming the voice of Mort Goldman on Family Guy. (Not surprisingly, Seth MacFarlane–like legions of other current power players–was a huge fan.) The Boys haven't seen each other since 1999. They haven't chatted on the phone since 2009, when Kamal says Johnny reneged on a deal to create a Jerky Boys cartoon. Today Johnny doesn't mention Kamal on the Jerky Boys Web site, claiming his old friend was basically just a "hired gun" and that anyone could have voiced his characters.

Nonetheless the Jerky Boys left their mark. "The baby boomer generation can say where they were when they heard Kennedy got shot," says comedian and radio personality Artie Lange. "My buddies knew where they were when they first heard the Jerky Boys."

ORIGIN STORY

Before the platinum albums, Johnny Brennan was a construction worker with little ambition beyond playing guitar in cover bands. In the mid-'80s, he moved in with his best friend, Tony Galgan, and they both had tons of free time. They'd spend countless lazy afternoons and boozy nights combing through newspaper classifieds in search of suckers to prank call. Johnny got a speakerphone, improving the quality of the recordings they were making on a boom box. Soon after, Kamal, a friend of Tony's younger brother, started coming over with food from his father's Indian restaurant to make calls with Johnny.

By the late '80s, tapes known as the "Jerky Tapes" or "Auto Mechanic Tapes" spread nationwide. By most accounts, a friend of Kamal's, Gaetano Valic, created the master bootleg of 10 calls. "I made six copies," Valic says. "In three months it became known in the tristate area. Everyone was making copies of copies."

The secret of their success was Johnny and Kamal's ability to keep people on the line. They called businesses with legitimate-sounding requests and slowly clowned their marks. But it was their characters that had fans howling. There was Sol Rosenberg, a neurotic New Yorker; Frank Rizzo, a vile auto mechanic who vowed he'd "work circles around you"; and Frank Kissel, an elderly World War II veteran who accuses a plumber of killing his Uncle Freddie.

Johnny and Kamal unceremoniously dropped Tony ("I'd have loved to go on that ride with them, but I wasn't offered," says the now-tenured N.Y.C. Dept. of Transportation employee) and in 1991 began working with "Uncle" Lou Gatanas, a local guitar collector and entrepreneur who invested time and money in them.

Gatanas launched a national 900 number to showcase the pranks and, because he hadn't received clearance from the victims, had to convince the phone company the calls were rehearsed skits made by actors. 1-900-A-U-JERKY provided full-length listens and generated the first income from their material. At one point it made $6,000-$8,000 a month. Most of the profits went to advertising the hotline on The Howard Stern Show.

Around 1993 "Crazy" Joe Renda, a retired rock promoter in St. Petersburg, Florida and a fan of the tapes, created Detonator Records to market them. But the tapes still had no official name. That's when Johnny's mother suggested calling it the Jerky Boys, referencing Frank Rizzo's go-to nickname for people. Newly christened, the Jerky Boys' first 3,000 cassettes were printed at a Christian record factory in St. Pete's. It was a good start, but demand quickly outgrew Renda's resources.

Johnny and Kamal started to outgrow each other, too, arguing about everything from who was funnier and more recognizable to who came up with what and what lawyers to hire. They had agreed on a 50-50 split of the money, but Johnny gave Kamal a smaller percentage from the start, Kamal says. Kamal also felt like Johnny's ego was stroked by handlers and hangers-on. "He went from a humble guy to thinking he was Elvis," Kamal says. "I used to say, 'John, I don't know who you think we are.'" Their relationship became even more strained when Gatanas attempted to replace Kamal by mimicking his Indian-accented character.

Renda was pushed aside when Fred Munao of Select Records stepped in and bought the Jerky Boys' contract for $100,000. Select's distribution and promotional resources catapulted the pranksters to superstardom, but what Munao really wanted to do was sell a movie.

The trouble with that plan was that Johnny and Kamal weren't actors...or even stand-ups. Though he'd mastered crank calls, Johnny was slightly agoraphobic and suffered from stage fright. He recorded later albums while sitting in darkness and passed on offers for the Jerky Boys to appear on SNL and Mad TV. He turned down David Letterman twice, opting instead to phone in a prank. When they did appear on television, both Johnny and Kamal would freeze or tell awkward jokes. The Jerky Boys were also offered morning radio gigs; even a sitcom was kicked around. "I was a little bit shy," Johnny admits today. "I would have handled it better now than I did then."

▸ HOLLYWOOD SHUFFLE

Shyness, however, would not get in the way of Munao's plan for a feature movie. Translating the Jerky Boys' brand of humor to film was a challenge, but capitalizing on their popularity was a no-brainer to studio executives. Munao says Johnny and Kamal met with 12 studios before signing with Touchstone. The duo split $1 million and were pegged to become even bigger stars. "It was a real hot project," recalls journeyman actor James Lorinz, who played wannabe gangster Brett Weir in the film. "My agent kept saying it was going to be another Wayne's World."

The Jerky Boys' movie had an $8 million budget and was shot in the spring of 1994 on the Queens streets they grew up on. On set Johnny and Kamal were distant, often arguing or not speaking at all for long stretches. During downtime Kamal escaped to play Wiffle Ball with local kids while Johnny signed autographs.

Released on February 3, 1995, the movie flopped. The guys' on-camera awkwardness and the lack of chemistry splashed across the big screen did not a hit make. The plot was vapid and the script watered-down–Lorinz remembers reading a raunchier script during casting. Opening-week numbers were middling, but a snowstorm hit the Northeast soon after, and the movie was buried. "Word got out immediately that the movie was not good," says then-New York Daily News gossip columnist A.J. Benza. "It didn't portray at all how funny these guys were. I don't know if a movie could."

Despite being littered with "Jerky-isms"–"sizzle chest," "liver lips," and, of course, "squeaky balls"–fans never embraced the film. Critics were even tougher; The New York Times called the film "virtually jokeless." Nor has it aged well. The film has a 3.9 out of 10 IMDb user rating, and Disney, which owns Touchstone, never released it on DVD. "We were trying to make a film everyone could see," says the director, James Melkonian. "I think since it was already R-rated, we could have pushed that more."

Soon after, Munao sold the Jerky Boys to Mercury Records, but talent agency CAA dropped them as clients. "It ended our careers," Kamal says. "It was all John's fault, because Warner Bros. wanted us, and we could have made a rougher movie. But he wanted to go with Disney." Johnny agrees that it was indeed his choice. "At the end of the day, I did decide to go with Disney."

▸ DOWN FOR THE COUNT

Despite their personal conflicts and a decline in sales and, almost as important, hype, the Jerky Boys released four more albums after the movie. They improved their tactics, adding incoming pranks and emphasizing recurring characters. But by the time Jerky Boys 3 hit stores in August 1996, the Internet had made their entire library available for free. "I'm at a liquor store, and the owner says, 'I'm a longtime fan, and I ripped all your shit from the Web," Johnny recalls. "I felt like saying, 'Do you understand what you're telling me?'"

Other comedians stepped into the lane they'd created. Johnny says Jimmy Kimmel approached him about working on his then-developing prank-call puppet show, Crank Yankers. Johnny declined, feeling the concept was too similar to his own. Needless to say, the show was a huge success without him. Prank calls soon became a staple of morning radio shows everywhere, and the Jerky Boys were ripped off, both directly and indirectly. One of the few things Johnny and Kamal do agree on nowadays is that they both find "Achmed," the Middle Eastern terrorist puppet voiced by comedian Jeff Dunham, to be too close to Kamal's last name. Achmed's catchphrase "I kill you" is also nearly identical to Kamal's line from an early prank called Terrorist Pizza.

They last worked together in 2000 on Big Money Hustlas, a low-budget flick by Insane Clown Posse. But by that point their friendship was so fractured they didn't share any scenes.

KING OF QUEENS

It's Friday, December 30, 2011, and the last day the Palace Diner in Flushing, Queens, a local favorite for nearly four decades, will be open for business. As the staff boxes up silverware, Kamal pushes a large bacon cheeseburger past his wide smile. He left the Jerky Boys over a decade ago but still enjoys some perks. "I've gotten crew and actors to work cheap because they remembered me," says Kamal, a 6'3" bear of a dude whose dark hair is now tinged with gray. "One guy donated 40,000 feet of film."

What angers Kamal the most is that Johnny calls himself the "sole creator of the Jerky Boys," even going so far as to say that he created Kamal's characters based on various family members and friends in his life.

Since the split Johnny has released two Jerky Boys iPhone apps. He also revives the Rizzo and Rosenberg voices on radio appearances and on his podcast. He believes the material still has legs and is eager to repurpose the Jerky Boys for an animated series, most likely without Kamal. "I've been holding the torch," Johnny says. "I gave Kamal props for spreading the tapes out, but the whole franchise, I have to keep it going."

Kamal says he buried the hatchet when he and Johnny last spoke back in 2009. Johnny says they just "touched base." They also have different takes on another significant moment in their history.

At the 1995 Grammys, Johnny and Kamal walked what felt like a mile of red carpet, past the hordes of paparazzi and photographers. "You know how people slow down to make sure their picture is snapped?" says Johnny. "We just kept walking, like a Three Stooges thing."

Kamal laughs. He remembers it a little bit differently. "When we were nominated for the Grammy and the limo dropped us off, we walked past every photographer, and not one took a picture of us," he says. "I asked John, 'Do you still think we're as important as you believe we are?'"

"He said nothing."

UNDER THE INFLUENCE THE JERKY BOYS INSPIRED A GENERATION OF IDIOTS...AND THESE FOLKS.

CRANK YANKERS
The Comedy Central prank show's swapped foul-mouthed humans for foul-mouthed puppets.

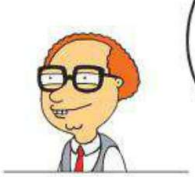

TOM GREEN
The moose-humping MTV host got his start making Jerky-inspired prank calls on his Canadian public-access show.

ARRESTED DEVELOPMENT
George Michael is obsessed with the Jerkys, who inspire him to make his own (awkward) prank calls.

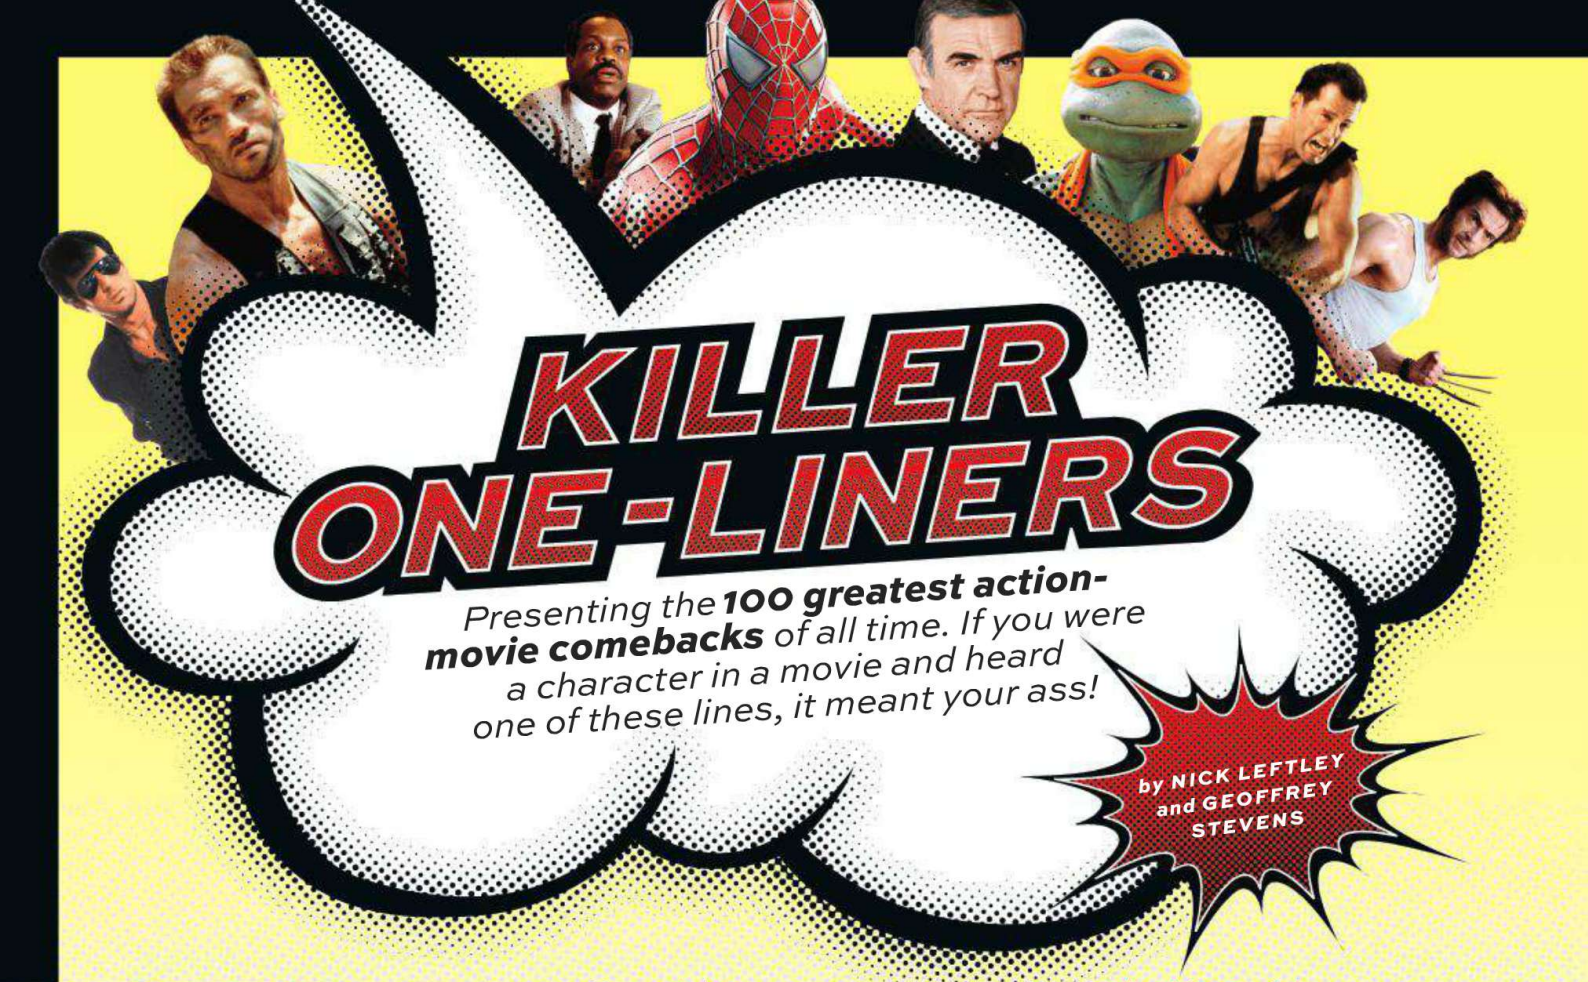

RADIOHEAD
The mope rockers' debut, Pablo Honey, got its title from a name in Jerky Boys 2. It's also sampled on the track "How Do You?"

FAMILY GUY
Johnny Brennan voices the nebbishy Mort Goldman, who, not surprisingly, talks exactly like Sol Rosenberg.

KILLER ONE-LINERS

Presenting the 100 greatest action-movie comebacks of all time. If you were a character in a movie and heard one of these lines, it meant your ass!

by NICK LEFTLEY and GEOFFREY STEVENS

100 Moonraker
The setup: Bond shoots Hugo Drax in the heart with a poison dart, then throws him out of an air lock into space. (Don't ask; it was the '70s).
The quip: "Take a giant step for mankind!"

99 Hard to Kill
The setup: Steven Seagal hears bad guy Senator Trent saying, "You can take that to the bank!"
The quip: "I'm going to take you to the bank, Senator Trent. The blood bank!"

98 The Running Man
The setup: Ben Richards beats futuristic gladiator Buzzsaw by chain-sawing him in half, groin first. As he runs away, his partner asks where the bad guy went.
The quip: "He had to split."

97 Cobra
The setup: Sylvester Stallone's Lieutenant Marion "Cobra" Cobretti confronts a wired gunman who's robbing a grocery store and taking hostages.
The quip: "You're the disease, and I'm the cure."

96 Tombstone
The setup: Wyatt Earp slaps a rude dealer around and dares him to draw his pistol or get out.
The quip: "Are you gonna do something? Or just stand there and bleed?"

95 The Condemned
The setup: Steve Austin's Jack Conrad is about to kill his nemesis on a Hunger Games-like TV show where 10 death-row inmates fight to the finish.
The quip: "Sounds like you've had a hard life. Good thing it's over!"

94 Thunderball
The setup: Bond harpoons a thug into a tree.
The quip: "I think he got the point."

93 Drive Angry
The setup: How can Nicolas Cage's Milton have time to drink and relax when there are bad guys to kill?
The quip: "I don't believe I'll be having that beer just now. Not unless I'm drinking it from Jonah King's skull."

92 The Living Daylights
The setup: Bond crushes his war-loving enemy under a statue of the Duke of Wellington.
The quip: "He met his Waterloo."

91 Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia
The setup: Bennie just offed some rival bounty hunters while fighting for the sack containing Alfredo Garcia's head. He fires a few more rounds into one of the dying bounty hunters for good measure.
The quip: "Why? Because it feels so goddamn good!"

90 Passenger 57

The quip: "No thanks. I've already had a wife."

64 Independence Day
The setup: Will Smith punches an alien in the face, knocking it out.
The quip: "Welcome to Earth!"

63 The Matrix
The setup: Trinity puts a gun to the head of an agent who's just dodged an endless volley of bullets, and pulls the trigger.
The quip: "Dodge this."

62 Indiana Jones and The Last Crusade
The setup: Indy's dad berates Jones Jr.'s rescue attempts, prompting Indy to machine-gun three Nazis to death.
The quip: "Don't call me Junior!"

61 Live and Let Die
The setup: 007 hurls henchman Tee Hee out of a moving train, using his own detachable, claw-tipped prosthetic arm against him. Bond girl Solitaire asks what he's doing.
The quip: "Just being disarming, darling."

60 Once Upon a Time in Mexico
The setup: Danny Trejo's Cucuy questions orders from Johnny Depp's Sands, who puts him in his place.
The quip: "Are you a Mexi-can? Or a Mexi-can't?"

59 Lethal Weapon 2
The setup: The big bad guy shoots Riggs and then reminds Murtaugh that he has his diplomatic immunity. Murtaugh responds by blowing his brains out.
The quip: "It's just been revoked."

58 The Outlaw Josey Wales
The setup: When a bounty hunter tells Josey Wales what he does for a living, Wales offers the fellow a little career advice.
The quip: "Dyin' ain't much of a livin', boy."

57 Big Trouble in Little China
The setup: Jack Burton and his friend Wang are about to storm Lo Pan's palace and battle all kinds of martial arts monsters to rescue Wang's fiancée.
The quip: "Sit tight, hold the fort, keep the home fires burning. And if we're not back by dawn...call the president."

56 Air Force One
The setup: Harrison Ford's President James Marshall tells Gary Oldman's Russian terrorist that it's time for him to jump out of Air Force One.
The quip: "Get off my plane!"

55 Young Guns II
The setup: Billy the Kid shoots his jailer with his own shotgun—loaded with 18 dimes in each barrel.
The quip: "Best $1.80 I ever spent!"

54 Rambo III
The setup: Faced with impossible odds, the Colonel asks Rambo what his plan is. Rambo loads his gun and prepares to let loose.
The quip: "Fuck 'em."

53 Man on Fire (2004)
The setup: As Creasy assembles a rocket launcher, an old man tells him that in church they say to forgive.
The quip: "Forgiveness is between them and God. My job's to arrange the meeting."

52 Dolemite
The setup: Think you can frame a pimp like Dolemite and get away with putting him in jail for 20 years? Think again!
The quip: "Dolemite is my name, and fuckin' up mothafuckas is my game!"

51 Iron Man
The setup: Tony Stark's shocked secretary finds him trying to coax various robots to strip him of his bullet-riddled Iron Man armor.
The quip: "Let's face it...this is not the worst thing you've caught me doing."

50 Dark Angel (I Come in Peace)
The setup: The alien drug dealer villain keeps saying that he comes in peace, but Dolph Lundgren lets him know exactly how he'll be leaving.
The quip: "And you go in pieces, asshole!"

49 The World Is Not Enough
The setup: Elektra King teases Bond, saying he would never shoot her because he'd miss her too much. Surprise! Bond blows her away.
The quip: "I never miss."

48 Sin City
The setup: Human engine of destruction Marv is finally about to meet his fate in the electric chair. The first jolt doesn't quite manage the job.
The quip: "Is that the best you can do, you pansies?"

47 The Untouchables
The setup: After one of Al Capone's henchmen breaks into Jim Malone's house to stab him with a switchblade, Malone surprises the trespasser with a sawed-off shotgun.
The quip: "Isn't that just like a wop? Brings a knife to a gunfight."

46 Eraser
The setup: Arnie shoots a crocodile.
The quip: "You're luggage!"

45 The Rock
The setup: Faced with a knife-wielding baddie, Goodspeed tries to instigate a conversation about Elton John songs, then tricks his foe into standing in front of a rocket, which he launches into his chest.
The quip: "I only bring it up because it's you. You're the Rocket Man!"

44 Death Wish II
The setup: Right before Charles Bronson fires a bullet into a local drug dealer's chest, he notices a giant cross hanging around his neck.
The quip: "You believe in Jesus? Well, you're gonna meet him."

43 From Russia With Love
The setup: Bond helps defeat the villainous Rosa Klebb, whose shoe is augmented by a poisoned dagger.
The quip: "She had her kicks."

42 Action Jackson
The setup: Carl Weathers' titular character pauses for a moment to ask a thug this question right before he lights him on fire with a grenade launcher.
The quip: "How do you like your ribs?"

41 Tango & Cash
The setup: Ray Tango has just stuffed a live grenade down the pants of a henchman he's been interrogating.
The quip: "My little contribution to birth control."

40 Blade
The setup: Blade has his vampire opponent all but beat, and prepares to round-house kick a syringe full of vampire-killing juice into his skull.
The quip: "Some motherfuck-ers are always trying to ice-skate uphill."

39 The Terminator
The setup: Sarah Connor crushes the legless-but-lethal Terminator in an industrial press.
The quip: "You're terminated, fucker!"

38 Inglourious Basterds
The setup: As Lt. Aldo Raine carves a swastika into a German forehead, Donny tells him he's getting good at it.
The quip: "You know how you get to Carnegie Hall, don't cha? Practice!"

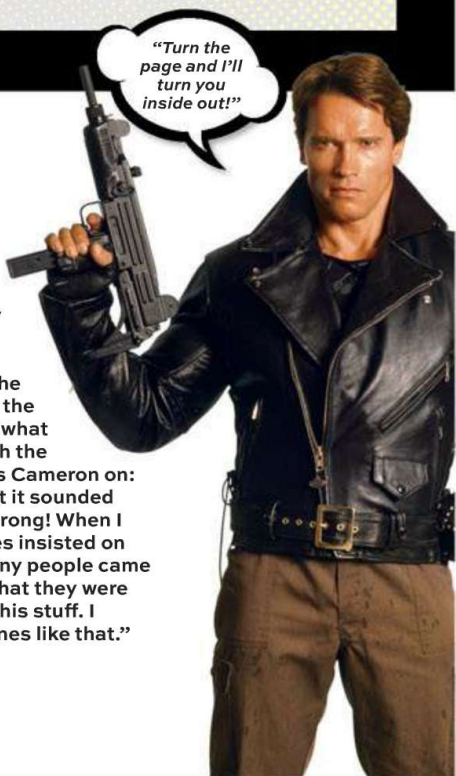

37 X-Men Origins: Wolverine
The setup: Stryker tries to appeal to Wolverine's patriotic nature, telling him America needs him.
The quip: "I'm Canadian."

36 Assault On Precinct 13 (1976)
The setup: The warden punches Wilson out of his chair for no reason, commenting that he must have slipped on the floor. Wilson still manages a sarcastic response.
The quip: "Yeah, I don't sit in chairs as well as I used to."

ONE-LINER MASTER CLASS

"STICK AROUND!" AS ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER EXPLAINS THE ART OF THE QUIP.

"The one-liners that are most repeated are my favorites: 'Hasta la vista, baby,' 'I'll be back,' 'Fuck you, asshole,' 'Stick around.' One-liners are an art—the writing is very important, but the way you say the line and the pause you give it, the way you set it up, the facial expression, that's what makes it memorable. I learned that quickly with the 'I'll be back' line, which is a line I fought James Cameron on: I thought I should say, 'I will be back.' I thought it sounded more like a machine. Of course, I was totally wrong! When I saw it on the screen, I was so happy that James insisted on 'I'll be back!' When the movie came out, so many people came up to me saying, 'Say the line!' I had no idea what they were talking about at first. People really get off on this stuff. I realized how much it meant to people, those lines like that."

35 Speed

The setup: Wrestling with each other on top of a moving subway train, Payne repeatedly screams to Jack that he's smarter than him. He disproves this by being immediately decapitated by a hanging light.
The quip: "Yeah? Well, I'm taller."

34 Die Hard 2

The setup: While helping him out with some intel, Al Powell asks McClane if he's about to piss in some-one's pool again.
The quip: "Yeah. And I'm fresh out of chlorine."

33 Kiss Kiss Bang Bang

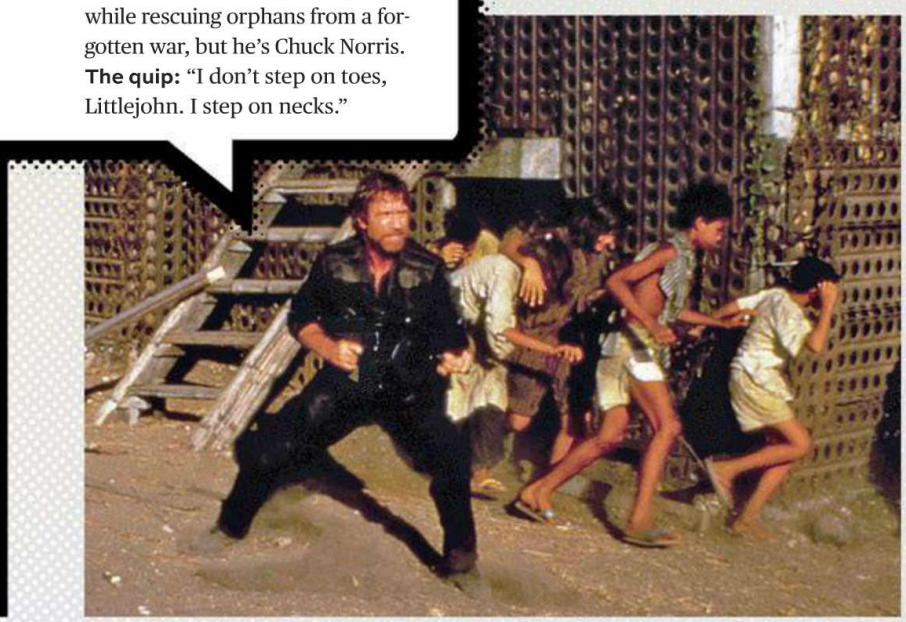

The setup: Breaking the fourth wall, Perry addresses the audience right at the end of the movie.
The quip: "That's it, please stay for the end credits. If you're wondering who the best boy is, it's someone's nephew. Don't forget to validate your parking, and, uh, for all you good people in the Midwest, sorry we said 'fuck' so much."

32 Casino Royale (2006)

The setup: Bond, naked and being tortured by having his testicles brutalized, shows that he's still quite capable of making threats.
The quip: "Now the whole world is going to know that you died scratching my balls!"

31 Braddock: Missing In Action III

The setup: Chuck Norris' commander orders him to keep a low profile while rescuing orphans from a forgotten war, but he's Chuck Norris.
The quip: "I don't step on toes, Littlejohn. I step on necks."

30 Jaws

The setup: Chief Brody aims his rifle at the oxygen tank lodged in the shark's mouth and takes his last, desperate shot.
The quip: "Smile, you son of a..."

29 True Lies

The setup: Superspy Harry launches a missile from his plane–a missile that has the lead terrorist hanging from it.
The quip: "You're fired!"

28 48 Hrs.

The setup: After starting trouble in a redneck bar, Reggie pretends to be a police officer. One of the locals asks him what kind of cop he is.
The quip: "You know what I am? I'm your worst fuckin' nightmare, man. I'm a nigger with a badge. That means I got permission to kick your fuckin' ass whenever I feel like it!"

27 Diamonds Are Forever

The setup: Bond dispatches Mr. Wint by tying a bomb to his coattails and flipping him off the side of a cruise liner. (Bond is very thorough, sometimes).
The quip: "Well, he certainly left with his tails between his legs."

26 Universal Soldier

The setup: Luc impales the psychotic Scott on a threshing machine, then turns the thing on and watches it spit out the bloody lumps.
The quip: "You're discharged, Sarge."

25 On Her Majesty's Secret Service

The setup: Bond forces a skiing henchman into a snowblower, vaporizing him.
The quip: "He had a lot of guts!"

24 Hellboy

The setup: The beast Sammael tries to wrap up Hellboy in its venomous tongue. Hellboy grabs it and squeezes.
The quip: "Second date–no tongue!"

23 Predator

The setup: Arnie hurls a machete through a nameless thug's chest, pinning him to a pillar.
The quip: "Stick around!"

22 Ghostbusters

The setup: Dr. Peter Venkman gets cocky after the Ghostbusters trap their first ghoul, Slimer.
The quip: "We came, we saw, we kicked its ass!"

21 Beverly Hills Cop

The setup: Axel Foley gets thrown through a window, then finds himself under arrest for disturbing the peace.
The quip: "Disturbing the peace?? I got thrown out of a window! What's the fucking charge for getting pushed out of a moving car, huh? Jaywalking?"

20 Timecop

The setup: Walker kicks a guy into a vat of liquid nitrogen, instantly freezing his arm. Walker then kicks the arm, shattering it into pieces and kicks the thug over the railing to plummet to his death.
The quip: "I guess I should have told him to freeze."

19 The Long Kiss Goodnight

The setup: Geena Davis' Charly asks Samuel L. Jackson's Mitch–who has just been whacked in the nuts–if he's thinking what she's thinking.
The quip: "I hope not, 'cause I'm thinking how much my balls hurt."

18 Goldeneye

The setup: Bond shoots down the helicopter that's dangling assassin Xenia Onatopp, causing her to get crushed against a tree.
The quip: "She always did enjoy a good squeeze."

17 Spider-Man

The setup: In his first outing, Spidey faces wrestler Bonesaw McGraw, whom he decides to wind up with a little trash talk.
The quip: "That's a cute outfit: Did your husband give it to you?"

16 Demolition Man

The setup: Ultra-cop John Spartan lets a bad guy know the score.
The quip: "You're gonna regret this the rest of your life. Both seconds of it."

15 Tomorrow Never Dies

The setup: Bond punches a man into a printing press, where he's crushed.
The quip: "They'll print anything these days."

14 The Last Boy Scout

The setup: Bruce Willis' Hallenbeck gets meta while schooling his new partner on quipping etiquette.
The quip: "This is the '90s. You can't just walk up and slap a guy, you have to say something cool first."

13 Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles

The setup: An army of Foot Soldiers crash into April's apartment; Michelangelo decides to make a funny.
The quip: "Boy, and I thought insurance salesmen were pushy!"

12 The Expendables

The setup: Paine asks Barney how many men he has with him on the mission.
The quip: "Just your mother!"

11 X-Men

The setup: Worried it's the shape-shifting Mystique again, Cyclops asks Wolverine to prove he's who he says he is.
The quip: "You're a dick."

5 The Avengers

The setup: Loki screams at Hulk that he's a god; Hulk responds by repeatedly smashing Loki into the floor like a rag doll.
The quip: "Puny god."

10 Die Hard

The setup: Cornered under a table, McClane blows away a guy who's just told him never to waste an opportunity to kill someone.
The quip: "Thanks for the advice!"

9 The Dark Knight

The setup: The Joker, thinking he has Batman beat, asks him if he knows how he got his facial scars. Batman, feeling saucy, fires razor blades into his face.
The quip: "No–but I know how you got these!"

8 Sudden Impact

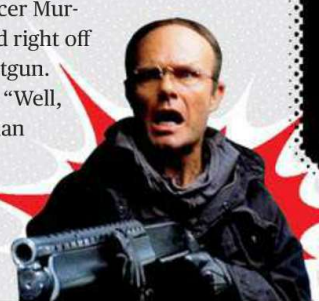

The setup: A thug is holding a waitress at gunpoint in a diner when Harry Callahan pulls out his .44 magnum and dares the thug to make the first move.
The quip: "Go ahead. Make my day."

7 Scarface

The setup: About to be overwhelmed by goons, Tony shows that he has one last trick left up his coke-stained sleeves: namely, a machine gun with a grenade launcher.
The quip: "Say hello to my leeetle friend!"

6 RoboCop

The setup: Gang boss Clarence Boddicker blows Officer Murphy's hand right off with a shotgun.
The quip: "Well, give the man a hand!"

4 Army of Darkness (Evil Dead 3)

The setup: Henry the Red introduces himself to fellow prisoner Ash with his full title. Ash, battered and pissed, replies...
The quip: "Well, hello, Mr. Fancy Pants! I've got news for you, pal–you ain't leading but two things right now: Jack and shit. And Jack left town."

3 They Live

The setup: John Nada walks into a bank to see it's filled with aliens disguised as humans. He draws his gun...
The quip: "I have come here to chew bubblegum and kick ass. And I'm all out of bubblegum."

2 Goldfinger

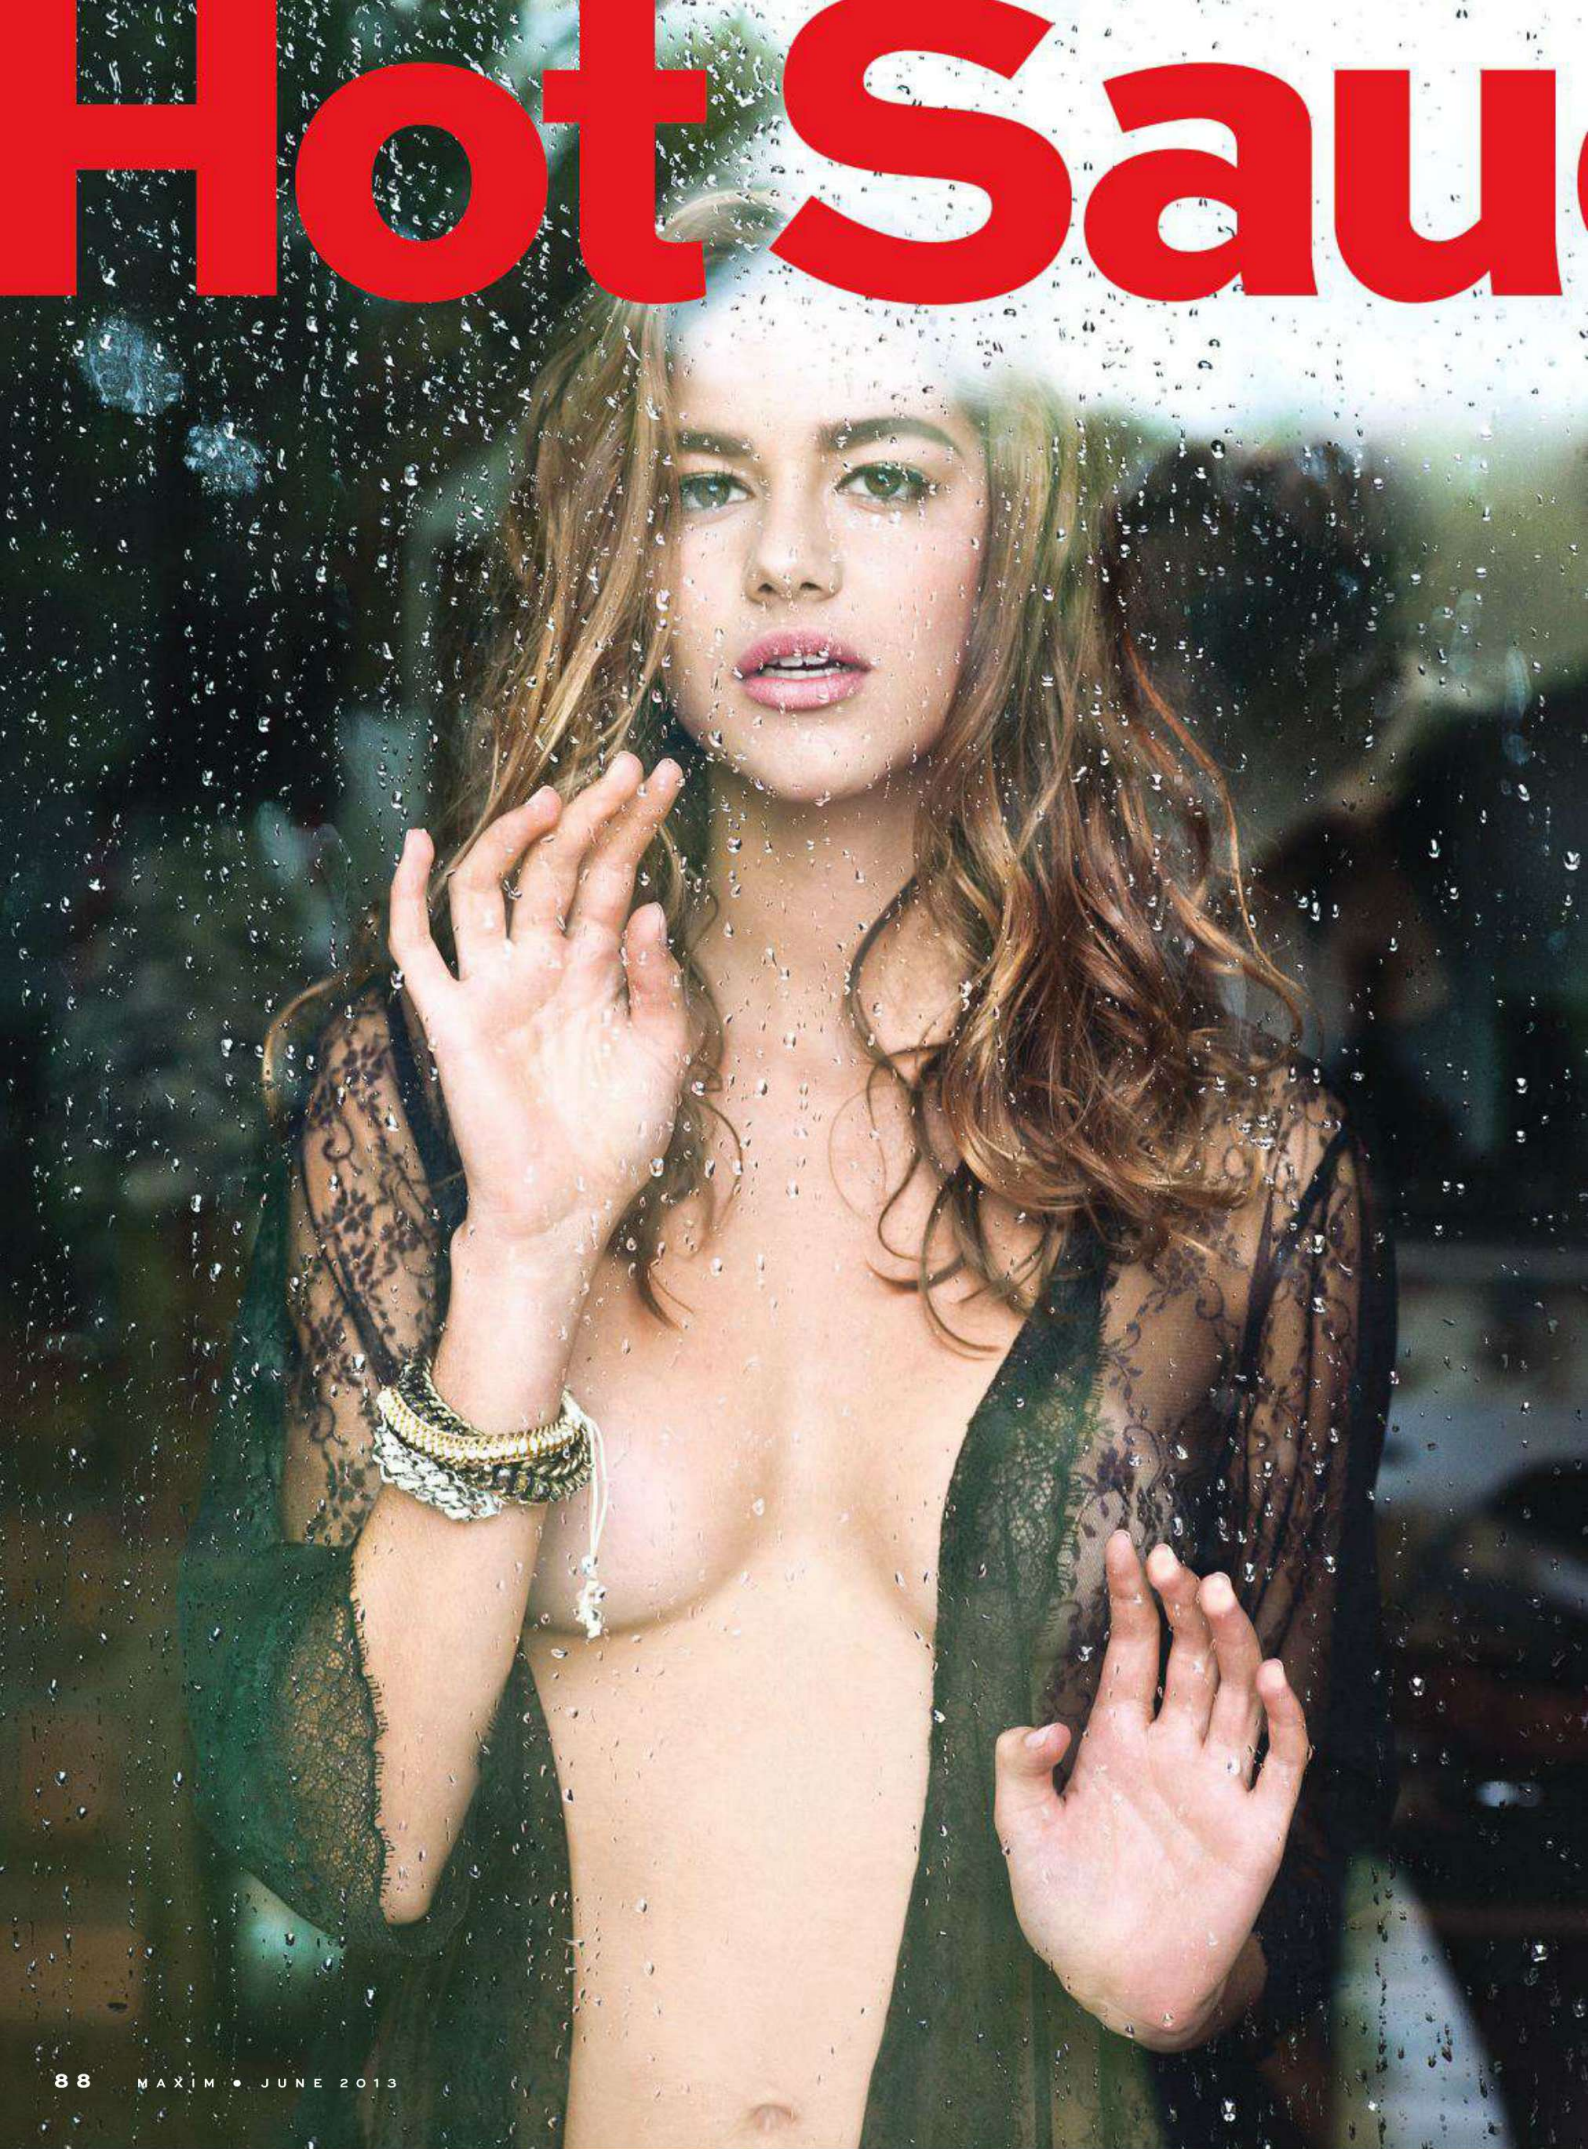

The setup: Bond punches a baddie into a full bathtub, then hurls in an electric fan. Tzzzttt!
The quip: "Shocking. Positively shocking."

1 Commando

The setup: Arnie impales a dude with a big steam pipe.
The quip: "Let off some steam, Bennett!"

Study Abroad

Fresh from the pages of Maxim Portugal, it's el hot-o model-o LORENZA ZORER!

How did the shoot go?
The whole team was great, and I really enjoyed the experience. We tried to turn a simple environment into something sexy.

And you succeeded spectacularly!
I think it turned out well!

What kind of guys do you usually go for?
I like a man who is comfortable with himself.

We have so much in common! What's your idea of a perfect date?
I never idealize a perfect date, because when you are with the right person you can find yourself in the most unexpected situations.

In our case that could very well be jail.

11 A.M. Sexiest moment in Ben Franklin's life.

2 P.M. Livening up our regular afternoon Yahtzee game.

4 P.M. There go the funds for his new kidney.

RÉSUMÉ

NAME

HOMETOWN
Gaithersburg, Maryland

BIRTHDAY
July 11

GO-TO KARAOKE SONG
"Don't Cha" by the Pussycat Dolls

CELEBRITY CRUSHES
"Bradley Cooper and Megan Fox."

SECRET TALENT
"I can move one butt cheek at a time."

6 P.M. His bet (and acting lessons) didn't pay off.

What bets were going around the office today?
Surprisingly, none of the bets were sports-related! The guys were betting on things like who was wearing the most expensive shoes and who could win a date with me.

The stakes must have gotten pretty high.
One guy put his apartment up as a wager! I mean, things got serious.

So who turned out to be the lucky guy?
A few bigwigs upstairs had potential, but then they tried to impress me with cash, which is a big no-no. I ended up picking one of the poor editors.

What's your type of guy?
I like tall guys who are funny and smell good. I like to keep it simple.

Do you like to gamble in your spare time?
Not really. I try to keep business separate from my personal life.

Fair enough. Then again, your line of work isn't entirely legal...
You'd be surprised how many places around here have secret gambling going on. My next stop is the pizza joint down the street. That's where all the real high rollers hang out.

You're never worried about getting busted?
When I started, I was a little concerned, but you know, I'm clever. I have my ways of getting away with things.

16 YEARS OF MAXIM

Anna Kournikova

As tennis season gets into full swing (see what we did there?), we think the time is right to pay homage to the hottest female player in the history of the game: four-time Maxim cover model Anna Kournikova! The Russian-born beauty first burst onto the scene as a hard-hitting 16-year-old back in 1997 and, after several years on the Grand Slam circuit, retired to a $20 million mansion on a private island in Miami with her boyfriend, Enrique Iglesias. Anna, you guys need a pool boy?
